LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — A campaign to convince the consumer about how work in the fields translates to food on the table is under way through the efforts of the Lebanon County Farm Bureau.

Greg Hostetter, Farm Bureau vice president and a dairy farmer near Lebanon, said farmers should "stop and think about what you can always count on but take for granted."

The new campaign, "Thank A Farmer," brings this message to southeast and south central Pennsylvania radio listeners: "The sun will rise and your Lebanon County farmers will produce food for you."

The campaign idea sprang from the October board meeting of the Lebanon County Farm Bureau, when a member commented that the general public does not realize the extent of what farmers provide.

"Board members agreed that promotion should be done, so we discussed the issues and decided to look into it," said Hostetter.

Hostetter's homework included researching different types of media and the cost associated with each. Before the next board meeting he had compiled profiles and rates on radio stations and newspapers.

At the December board meeting Hostetter was encouraged to put his ideas on paper to give direction to the project.

"I began writing down the positive things I'd like to let nonfarm people know about agriculture," he said. "The more I wrote, the more passionate I got about agriculture's image. It piqued my interested and I started analyzing commercials, where I got format ideas and de-

Dairies Can Form 'Multiple Unit' Partnerships To Stay Competitive

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — For dairy producers who want to expand cow size by leveraging fixed assets over as many cows as possible, one dairy management expert told producers to form a "multiple unit partnership."

John Smith, extension specialist in dairy science with Kansas State University, knows of a number of different such farms in Kansas, with as many as 100 such partnerships working as business "cooperatives."

Smith spoke about trends and opportunities in dairying Wednesday afternoon at the Mid-Atlantic Dairy Management Conference at the Radisson Penn Harris in Camp Hill.

About 160 producers and agri-industry representatives attended the two-day conference, with a focus on managing dairies as business.

Smith consults with a variety of dairy sizes, ranging from 25-6,000 cows. He has heard of three, four, or more partners

Pa. Farmers To Meet With Representatives On Farm Issues

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — Facing a fourth straight year of low farm income nationwide, members of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau (PFB) will be taking their concerns about the future of agriculture to Washington, D.C. March 14-15 as they meet with their congressional representatives on priority farm issues.

"The tough times are continuing for agriculture across our country," said Guy Donaldson, president of the voluntary, statewide farm organization. "Through our grass-roots policy development process, our members have come up with recommendations for action Congress can take to help return agriculture to better times. Our intention is to press our case during face-to-face meetings with our elected officials in Washington."

Farmer members of legislative committees from PFB's 54 county farm bureaus will be visiting with the representatives and senators who represent their districts.

Topics for discussion will include the elimination of estate taxes and creation of "rainy-day" savings account for farmers. Increased regulations from the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) will also be on the agenda.

For Pennsylvania dairy producers, passage of federal legislation to expand the Northeast

ATLANTA, GA.
March 7, 2001
Report Supplied By USDA

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds was light and unaggressive with the bulk of activity as a result of previous commitments. Offerings reduced by recent cutbacks in production were fully adequate to ample, particularly on the 3.5 and 4 pound sizes. Live supplies were moderate to light; weights were mixed in a full range of light to heavy. Processing schedules were moderate. Less than trucklot asking prices were unchanged at 58 to 72 cents. Trade sentiment was barely steady to weak. Boneless skinless and bone-in breasts were irregularly balanced but where in excess slow to clear. Other cuts were in good balance to closely cleared.

Northeast Broiler Fryer Parts Part I

ATLANTA, GA.
Report Supplied By USDA

Trucklot buying activity was mostly fair to moderate as dealers cautiously assessed the market, however, occasional pick-up was noted where delivery delays were now being covered. Offerings of boneless-skinless breasts were at least adequate, and bone-in breasts were available and often at discounted levels. Drums and thighs were about adequate, and wings continued to clear well. Movement through retail channels was mostly fair, with best interest noted into refill. Renewed demand through restaurant lines had yet to surface. The market tone was barely steady to instances weak on bone-in breasts, fully steady on wings, about steady on the balance.

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO
March 7, 2001
Report Supplied By USDA

Daily National Grain Market Summary Grain and soybean bids moved slightly lower today. Export optimism, profit taking was noted, and some positioning ahead of USDA's report were all factors. Wheat bids 3 to 7 cents lower. Corn 3 to 4 cents lower. Sorghum 5 cents lower. Soybean bids 4 to 6 cent lower.

Expected rains and drop of moisture will move in Southern Plains areas later in the week. Wheat slightly lower as lack of fresh news to spark interest in the pits. Losses are being limited as expectations of a small reduction in exports will appear in USDA report. Corn bids lower with light profit taking and concerns of a negative report have the market on their toes. Export demand is slow and foot and mouth problems drove bids lower. Soybean bids were lower as traders looking for a hike in projected US exports and soybean meal continue to trade up and down.

The Old Farmer's Almanac This Week With Almanac

ST. PATRICK, MARCH 17

THE IDES OF MARCH

Anyone who has read William Shakespeare's play named for Julius Caesar probably remembers the ill-fated ides of March, when Caesar was assassinated in 44 B.C. The word "ides" comes from iduare for "to divide," in this case the month. According to the old Roman calendar, the ides fell on the 15th of March, May, July, and October, but on the 13th of the other months. Even after calendar reforms, however, the ides of March retained their ill-repute, probably in part because of the tendency for March weather to "come in like a lion and go out like a lamb." To the Romans, however, the ides of any month were unfavorable, as were the calends (the first of each month, also frequently named in weather lore) and the nones (nine days before the ides).

In beginning or in end, March its gift will send.

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Fertilize fruit trees, berries, and perennials now.

SHRIMP AND RICE CASSEROLE

1 cup cooked rice
1/2 pound cheddar, shredded or grated
2 cups cooked shrimp
4 eggs, separated
3/4 cup milk
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1/4 teaspoon onion salt
1/4 teaspoon dill weed

Mix rice, cheese and shrimp, reserving a little cheese for the top. Mix egg yolks and milk, then combine this with the shrimp mixture. Add seasonings. Beat egg whites until stiff and fold into the rest. Turn into a greased 2-quart casserole. Sprinkle grated cheese on top and bake at 375°F for 30 minutes.

Makes 8 servings.

The Old Farmer's Weather Proverbs

On March 15, come sun and swallow.

A dry east wind raises the spring.

If March comes in with adder's head, it goes out with a peacock's tail.

The First Environmentalists

Sometimes the general media considers farmers less than proactive. Food producers have been falsely criticized for so-called "hiding heads in the sand," letting someone else confront the pressures put upon them by environmental groups, letting someone else distribute the message of the goodness of their products.

But criticize no more!

The Lebanon County Farm Bureau's "Thank A Farmer" Campaign seems like a great idea, one that was a long time coming.

The campaign, which is described on our front page story this week, will reach radio listeners in the southeast and south central parts of the state.

We at Lancaster Farming especially enjoy the statement made in one commercial: "Farmers have been called the 'first environmentalists.' THEY ARE VERY CONCERNED ABOUT ENVIRONMENTAL ISSUES — IT IS HOW THEY MAKE THEIR LIVING" (emphasis ours).

Maybe other farming counties can take the first "proactive" steps to bring this message to the public — before other groups present their own. Because that "other message" may not be as truthful or welcome.

We welcome your ideas on this.

To Respond To Deer Hunt Proposal

The Pennsylvania Game Commission seeks public comment on proposed changes to the state's deer hunting regulations.

"The goal of the proposed changes is to decrease the doe populations while increasing the percentage of mature bucks," said Gary San Julian, professor of wildlife resources. The commission will finalize their changes at their April 8 meeting.

The deer population is as high as it ever has been, San Julian explained. "Each year 40,000 carcasses are picked up off the highways and probably that many more are hit and die in the woods and fields." Deer-vehicle collisions cost lives and do tens of millions of dollars in damage.

Deer are also responsible for about $75 million in damage to grain crops annually, according to San Julian. In addition, deer reduce the forests' ability to regenerate by eating young trees.

The proposed changes include:

• Starting the antlerless rifle season on the Saturday after Thanksgiving followed by a two-week concurrent season for antlered and antlerless deer, starting on Monday.

• Changing the "private lands" tag so the hunters can apply for a second antlerless deer permit if available in a specific county.

• Opening the muzzleloader "antlerless-only" season earlier (Oct. 18-20) and allowing hunters, disabled hunters, and active duty military personnel to use any sporting rifle to take does if they have the proper permits.

Overall, the changes will increase the doe season by 11 days. "We kill more than 80 percent of all the bucks in the population each hunting season," San Julian explained.

"The commission wants to see if starting the doe season on Saturday will make the bucks more wary and not as easy a target. It is hoped that hunters who just want to put venison in the freezer will take advantage of the first day of doe season."

To comment on the deer hunting proposals, send written comments to the Pennsylvania Game Commission, ATTN: Deer Season Comments, Bureau of Information and Education, Harrisburg PA 17110-9797.

To Evaluate The Dairy Fairness Bill

A pending dairy bill would provide a safety net for dairy farm families when market prices are low, according to a study by two dairy economists from Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. The study also concludes that the bill provides greater support to small and medium-sized dairy farms.

Kenneth Bailey, associate professor of diary marketing and policy, and James Dunn, professor of agricultural economics, present these conclusions in "Economic Analysis of the National Dairy Farmers Fairness Act of 2001" published last week.

This legislation was proposed by Senators Rick Santorum of Pennsylvania and Herb Kohl of Wisconsin to create a sliding scale of financial assistance for small and medium sized dairy operations.

According to Bailey, the bill has two unique features. The size of the supplemental payment is tied to general market conditions and the bulk of the payments are targeted to small and medium-sized dairy operations. This is beneficial to states such as Pennsylvania, which have many small family farms.

The general payment rate of 50 cents per hundred pounds (CWT) is made when the annual average Class III price of milk is below $10.50 per hundredweight. The Class III price of milk averaged about $9.74 per hundredweight in 2000. An additional payment of 30 cents per hundredweight would be made under those conditions if the producer did not expand production from the previous year. For a farm with 75 cows shipping 1.26 million pounds of milk annually, they would receive $6,290 if they expanded and $10,065 if they did not.

The study shows the bill would provide lower levels of price protection when the markets are stronger. For example, if the Class III price rises to between $12.01 and $12.50 per hundredweight, the general payment rate would be 18 cents per hundredweight and the additional payment rate for not expanding is 14 cents per hundredweight. Under this scenario the example farm with 75 cows would receive $2,265 if they expanded and $4,026 if they did not.

The complete study is available on the World Wide Web at http://www.aers.psu.edu/dairyoutlook/.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

CUT TO THE HEART!

Background Scripture:
Acts 2.
Devotional Reading:
John 3:5-8.

About 30 years ago, Marcus Bach, who wrote more than a dozen books on spirituality, told me of an incident that occurred one day when he was serving as guest speaker in a standard-brand-denomination church.

For his text he had selected Acts 1:8, "You shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you" (KJV). He began to talk about his own spiritual breakthrough and experience of the Holy Spirit. "It startled the three hundred sedate church members out of their Sunday morning complacency," he said, "and they looked up at me with astonished, unbelieving eyes."

After the service, the pastor of the church took him aside for what became a shouting match. The pastor accused him of offending the sensibilities and intelligence of his congregation and Bach replied, "That's the trouble with the church. Nobody wants to offend anybody. You preach what people want to hear. You never convict anybody of sin. You never challenge your people with their need for Christ." Eventually, they agreed to disagree and the pastor ended with, "Come on, let's go and eat." (See Marcus Bach, "The Inner Ecstasy," World Publishing Co., 1969).

In one of my confirmation classes, a young man asked me why Pentecost happened "then" and not "now." I'm not sure what I answered him, but I have come to realize that the Church can still experience Pentecost, although not necessarily in the same way that the early disciples experienced it, nor even as some pentecostal churches experience it today. (I am not saying theirs is not a valid experience, only that the experience does not have to be the same for all Christians.)

Conviction Of Sin

I believe one reason that Pentecost is not experienced by many Christians is that, as my friend Marcus put it, we "never convict anybody of sin." Sin is not mentioned today. (I might mention your sins, but not mine!).

In the weekly "religion" section of the Dallas Morning News recently was an article by a pastor who was writing about the apparent "fall from grace" of a certain public figure. I agree with all that she said, except that she used the word "indiscretion" for what the man had done. His act, I believe, was not that of committing an "indiscretion," but a "sin." He is no less forgivable for sinning than he would be for being indiscreet, but let's call it by the right name.

We weaken our sense of responsibility when we avoid the word. A friend once told me that she didn't like the Christian preoccupation with "sin."

"We make mistakes," she told me. "Our problem is usually not evil, but ignorance, and I don't feel nearly so damned when I know that I have been ignorant instead of sinful." But that is the problem: the initial need is not to feel unthreatened by what we have done or been, but to experience the pain of knowing that we have failed our Lord.

Then You Shall Receive

In Acts 2, we are told, "Now when they heard this they were cut to the heart, and said to Peter and the rest of the apostles, "Brethren, what shall we do?' And Peter said to them, "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the forgiveness of your sins; and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit'" (2:37,38).

If the Gospel of Jesus Christ does not "cut to the heart" of you from time to time, you are not listening to the message! As the Psalmist puts it: "If thou, O Lord, shouldst mark iniquities, Lord, who could stand?" (Ps.130:2).

The answer is easy: none of us! We all need to be "cut to the heart", not so that we can wallow in our sin, but that we can be freed of it, for the Psalmist assures us, "But there is forgiveness with thee . . ."

As Peter told the throng at Pentecost, first seek the forgiveness of your sins and then "you shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." Those who had been "cut to the heart" "received his word and were baptized . . ."

The writer of Acts does not tell us how these new disciples experienced the power of the Holy Spirit, except that "they devoted themselves to the apostles' teaching and fellowship, to the breaking of bread and the prayers" (2:42).

A Dry Cow Booster That Costs 7¢ a Day

Hoffmans Horse and Cattle Powder is an ideal tonic for cows over freshening. Feed 6 wks. before freshening. 1 Tablespoon a day. (Two weeks over freshening, feed 1 Tablespoon in the morning & 1 Tablespoon in evening)

Cows will clean better after freshening Cows have a lower somatic cell count and will have less mastitus problems Great for reproduction tract and cows will cycle better after freshening Will help rumen function over freshing Less feet problems and less stress

This is an over-all good booster if fed to dry cows, and it will pay you big dividends.

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

Ken Bailey
Penn State
March 2, 2001

Cheese Production Down

- American cheese production down 5.1 percent.
- Cheese prices very strong.
- Butter prices up to $1.50/ pound.
- February federal order prices announced.

Cheese prices this week on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange were very strong with blocks trading $1.31-$1.32 per pound and barrels trading $1.28-$1.29 per pound. These are very high prices for the end of February and came as a bit of a surprise.

These prices continue to reflect fear regarding the future milk supply. USDA announced today that production of American cheese in January was down 5.1 percent relative to a year ago. Total cheese production in January was off 1.2 percent.

These higher cheese prices may weaken a bit in the weeks to come. Cheese production will increase seasonally as we enter the spring flush. And 198,000 pounds of Midwestern process cheese entered the Commodity Credit Corporation during the weeks of Feb. 26-March 2. But the real sign that cheese prices may ease a bit in the coming weeks is in the futures market.

The Class III price for February was $10.27 per cwt, up $0.28 from January. It was based on a NASS survey cheese price of $1.1467 per pound. The rise in cheese prices during the last weeks of February and this week will show up in the Class III price for March. The Chicago Mercantile Exchange Class III futures price as of March 2 was $11.35 per cwt for March, an estimated $1.08 per cwt above the February price. However, that price is expected to decline to $11.05 per cwt in April and $11.08 in May. Clearly the market is looking for cheese prices to soften some in the coming weeks but remain well above support price levels.

Is Firewood The Best Fuel Choice?

WESTMINSTER, Md. — As winter kicks into high gear, the cost of keeping warm increases. And this year's escalating energy prices have many homeowners reevaluating their fuel options. Among the possibilities: firewood.

"Wood is a renewable resource that when used with modern catalytic stoves can be an environmentally sound and cost-effective source of home heat," says Jonathan Kays, a Natural Resources Specialist with Maryland Cooperative Extension, part of the University of Maryland's College of Agriculture and Natural Resources. However, the cost-effectiveness of firewood depends on several factors.

The heating value of any fuel is measured in British thermal units (Btu); one Btu is the amount of energy required to raise a pound of water one degree Fahrenheit. Different types of heaters burn fuel at different efficiencies. For example, the average airtight wood stove burns at an efficiency of 50 percent, an oil furnace burns at 65 percent, natural gas at 75 percent, and electricity at 100 percent.

But knowing this is not enough. You also need cost information.

The costs of various forms of energy are evaluated differently, which makes comparisons difficult. Such comparisons are further complicated by variations in the cost of wood. According to a recent survey of classified ads in newspapers throughout Maryland, prices for oak firewood — cut, split and delivered — range from $120 to $150 per cord. And these prices may increase as the winter progresses.

However, comparisons of the cost of various heating fuels can be made on the basis of their heat equivalents as expressed in dollars per million Btu ($/MBtu). A comparison of different fuel sources based on current prices (early December 2000) in the central Maryland area follows:

Fuel Source	Cost	$Mbtu
Oak firewood	$120/cord	$10.00
	$140/cord	$11.67
	$160/cord	$13.33
fuel oil	$1.60/gallon	$17.84
electric baseboard	8.39 cents/ Kilowatt hour	$24.58
electric heat pump	3.36 cents/ Kilowatt hour	$ 9.84
soft coal	$135/ton	$ 9.00
liquid propane gas	$1.75/gallon	$28.95
natural gas	$ .99/ccf	$15.23

As the table shows, firewood — even as $140 a cord — is a competitively priced and economical source of heat — especially when compared to liquid propane, natural gas, fuel oil and electric baseboard heat.

Firewood can be used to supplement your existing high-cost heat source and provide significant savings on weekends and evenings.

Before making a decision about switching from one heating method to another, however, you need to take into consideration the cost of installing a new heater or making your existing system safe. 'If you think that firewood might be the best alternative for you,' explains Kays, 'you'll have to buy a wood stove or fireplace insert. In some cases, you may have to have an extra chimney installed or an old chimney repaired and cleaned.' If you add a catalytic converter to reduce emissions, the price goes higher.

So it may take years of fuel savings to pay for a new installation. However, if you already have a wood stove or fireplace insert, you may incur only the minimal costs involved in cleaning and inspecting the existing chimney and stove. And if you are in a position to legally collect your own wood, the savings will be even greater.

It is the policy of the Maryland Cooperative Extension that no person shall be subjected to discrimination on the grounds of race, color, sex, religion, disability, age or national origin.

York Farmers Attend Corn 'Trade School'

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.) — They call it the county corn clinic.

But this popular, annual gathering of York area farmers is more than a "clinic." It's a combined short-course, mini-trade show, and in timeless farmer tradition, an informal idea-swap session.

While it focuses on the production of York County's most widely-grown grain crop, the annual corn clinic includes a wider scope of agronomy-related education. Much of the content is specifically geared toward farmers completing their state-mandated pesticide certification credits, with about 200 in attendance at the Feb. 8 meeting at the county's 4-H center.

Mark Goodson, York's extension agronomist, set the tone for the day with review of the newly-revised soil tests, as well as a technical look at the basics of soils.

New soil tests — at $6 each — have been expanded to deliver three years of nutrient recommendations. Goodson reminded growers that an effective soil test must include no less than 15-20 core topsoil samples taken from scattered spots of each field being sampled. Most testing labs are now using very similar processing methods, the procedures of which are graphically illustrated at the bottom of the test result sheets.

Recommendations focus on the "optimum" level, where the most efficient returns for nutrients are gauged, Goodson cautioned growers that, while good crop response is shown when nutrients are applied at the "below optimum" level of recommendations, the aim should be to keep soil nutrient levels maintained over the years at the optimum, or center green portion of the test chart.

"It doesn't pay to have nutrients off the scale, and livestock operations should especially be aware of their soil nutrient levels," he said.

While starter fertilizer is routine in corn cultivation, Goodson advised growers that little more may be necessary, in light of escalating costs, if soil nutrient levels are already high. Excessive application of nitrogen is not only wasteful in cost, since unused nitrogen will quickly leach out, but can create environmental problems like high nitrate levels in groundwater. Splitting applications of nitrogen, one boost for the seed's early growth, and a second as it approaches mid-summer growth spurt, is generally more efficient.

Goodson reviewed soil chemistry basics, using graphic presentations to show how soil is composed of 45 percent mineral matter, 25 percent each air and water, and five percent organic matter. Levels of the three ingredients in the mineral matter — sand, silt and clay particles — determine much of the quality of the soil.

Soil components, as well as the nutrients necessary for plant health, have positive or negative charges. And, like a magnet, the positive and negative attract, while positives and negatives repel like charges. An understanding of soil makeup, which components and nutrients are positive and negative, and how they interact, is helpful to producers for fine-tuning nutrient levels.

Clay particles, for instance, are composed of many microscopic layers which offer surface for these magnetic-like charges to convert nutrients for plant use. Just one-fourth of a cup of clay particles offer more chemical conversion surface than a football field. And the particles allow for water absorption, retention of nutrients and holding the soil together.

"It's an amazing miracle," marveled agronomist Goodson, of the intricate chemistry of soils and their ability to nurture plant growth.

One macronutrient of healthy soil, sulfur, is less available than in prior years, according to Goodson. And, that relates directly to cleaner-air measures undertaken in recent years.

"As we've cleaned up our air, there is less sulfur falling to the ground," he explained, of the sulfuric acids once given off by certain manufacturing and energy generation processes. Therefore, growers need to watch soil sulfur levels and take measures to add it, when soil tests indicate a low level of the macronutrient.

Bugged By Weevils

While healthy soils include many "bugs" of active bacteria, it was a "bug" of a different sort addressed by regional forage crop agent Paul Craig in his alert about alfalfa weevils.

"We were surprised by the weevils in the 2000 growing season," said Craig, noting that it had been almost 30 years since the last major outbreak in the region of the costly alfalfa pest.

Weevils, which winter over and hatch when temperatures warm, devour the tender, delicate growing tips of alfalfa, skeletonizing the leaves and leaving afflicted fields with a silvery cast. With weevil populations at their highest last summer since the outbreaks of the 1960s and 1970s, and a winter which was "perfect" for their carryover — steady cold and insulating snow cover, regional agronomists predict a likely serious infestation for the upcoming season.

Weevil larvae are 1/16" to 5/16" long, with a dark head and pale green body with a white stripe, very active, and according to Craig, "all they do is eat." They feed for 14-20 days, then molt in a cocoon into a quarter-inch weevil with a distinctive brown streak and snout.

"Go look in your fields; get out of your truck and scout your alfalfa," Craig emphasized. Two tools he advised to carry along are a bucket and a pocketknife, to cut 30 stems from random, scattered spots in each stand, then carefully counting the larvae/adults found feeding there. Two or more per stem, or 40 percent or more of the stems showing damage, indicate the need to "do something." Early or late in the day might be preferable for scouting, since Craig says the insects "hunker down" during the heat of the day and are more difficult to find.

Depending on the stage of the crop, that something to do in response to finding weevils might be to cut the crop and then spray the remaining stubble, or if the alfalfa is still young, spray the infestation immediately before more of the crop is chewed away.

Growers finding just a few weevil larvae or adults in their alfalfa stands should not panic, since a limited number of the insects actually attract their natural, biological control, a small wasp. That wasp lays its eggs in the larvae and adults, which destroys the weevil when the eggs hatch. However, the weevils reproduce much more rapidly than the controlling wasps, rendering this natural control ineffective when weevils populations explode.

A natural fungus which can destroy weevil in just three days occurs in some years, but the warm dry summers frequent to the area are not generally conducive to fungal growth.

"Good weather for hay is good weather for weevils," lamented the agronomist.

Craig believes that the 2000 infestation caught growers by surprise because the insects turned up in the first cutting. He noted that harvesting of alfalfa has changed since the last outbreak, with growers cutting earlier and generally making more cuttings, which fit well with the life cycle of the weevil, and allow for additional generations of the pest to proliferate during a growing season.

Several approved materials are available for dealing with weevils, but Craig warned about "cheating" by trying to stretch an application by diluting it. Adequate liquid carrier must also be used, so that leaves are well-wetted with any treatment solution.

"If you have south-facing alfalfa fields, those will warm first in spring. Check all fields in mid-April, then recheck at four to seven day intervals. Stop and look!" admonished Craig.

Seed Savers

For producers of corn and soybeans, some "bug" damage needs to be considered even before the seed germinates, in the form of seed-protection treatments and innoculants. Seed maggots and wireworms are two of those threats, insects which live in soils and destroy seeds before they can germinate. In cases of heavy infestations, plant population in fields can be seriously thinned by these underground seed enemies.

Seed maggots are yellow-white in color, round, legless and about one-quarter-inch long. They destroy a seed by burrowing into it. Soils with high organic matter, from heavy manure applications or green plant manure are especially prone to maggot infestations.

Wireworms are more commonly found in fields which were formerly in sod, where these pests can live for many years. The half-inch larvae are slender, shiny and cream-colored to brown.

Del Voight, pest management agent, emphasized that seed pest innoculant materials must come in contact with the seed to be effective. Putting it into the soil anywhere else, where it does not make direct seed contact, is simply wasting time and money.

ChemSweep

Clean. Triple rinse. Remove labels.

And then look for one of the more than 500 agriculture-chemical recycling bins that will be located around the state this upcoming crop season for disposal of empty, ag-chemical containers.

The move to locate handy receptacles for the plastic chemical containers at convenient sites around rural Pennsylvania is the latest move in the state's ChemSweep program.

Triple-rinsed plastic containers gathered in the program will be run through a granulating machine, which pulverizes them into small particles which are then recycled into solid plastic usables such as fences, marine building materials, even back into chemical storage containers. The containers are expected to be available at sites such as chemical handlers and equipment dealerships, providing easy, convenient disposal for farmers.

Instituted in 1993, ChemSweep has enabled the disposition of more than a million pounds of old, unused and sometimes abandoned and unlabeled, chemicals. More than one-fourth of that total came from the southcentral part of the state, according to York extension agronomist Mark Goodson.

"Pennsylvania is unique among state programs because the unwanted materials will be picked up right at your farm. An environmental contractor will supply everything, even the technicians to pick it up," Goodson said of the ongoing program to eliminate old, unwanted crop-treatment chemicals.

ChemSweep has been so successful that, after having worked the program in every county over the past several years, that the state is starting a re-run. Targeted 2001 in the Region 6 area are Dauphin, Franklin and Lancaster counties. However, Goodson urged any farmers with ag-chemicals materials they wish to have disposed of to contact their extension office to have arrangements made.

"There is no charge, no questions asked; the materials are just picked up and disposed of," adds Goodson. "It's already paid for through the pesticide program licensing fee."

For more information on ChemSweep, farmers are urged to contact their county extension offices.

The butter market was very firm this week, rising from $1.50 per pound on Monday to $1.5025 by Friday. USDA reports that while butter inventories are beginning to build, future supplies may be limited as ice cream and cream cheese production begins to increase. That will result in more competition for cream. And, if the milk supply is tightening, butter will be a very limiting factor in the milk markets in 2001. Butter production for January was down 9.7 percent!

USDA announced the February Class IV price at $12.70 per cwt, up $0.57 per cwt from January. That was based on a February average NASS survey butter price of $1.3143 per pound. The Class IV prices are expected to get even higher. As of March 2, the Chicago Mercantile Exchange Class IV futures contract prices rose to $13.30 per cwt in March, $13.70 per cwt in April, and $13.72 per cwt in May. Prices got even higher thereafter, peaking at $13.85 per cwt in August. Clearly the market is expecting butter prices to get even higher than they are right now.

Watch the butter market carefully. If the milk supply continues to tighten this month, butter prices will get even higher. That's because U.S. butter production begins to decline very rapidly past the spring flush. If you don't have it made by June, butter prices will be much higher the rest of the year.

USDA also had some interesting comments about dry dairy products. Concern about BSE and highly contagious foot and mouth disease in the EU may start to affect the international demand for dry dairy products. That may result in increased demand for U.S. products such as lactose, whey protein concentrate, and nonfat dry milk.

National Forest's Role In Local Economy To Be Examined

UNIVERSITY PARK (Center Co.) — The Allegheny National Forest (ANF) is both a beautiful natural preserve and an important economic resource for Warren County, and local residents must balance those sometimes conflicting interests.

Researchers from Penn State University and Penn State Cooperative Extension are offering an educational program to help local residents examine how the forest affects the local economy.

Beginning Feb. 6, three Penn State faculty members from University Park will team with Penn State Cooperative Extension in Warren County in initiating "Understanding the Allegheny National Forest's Role in Our Economy," a community-based study that will examine the forest's current and potential economic contribution to the region, using an economic impact model designed by Penn State faculty.

Martin Shields, assistant professor and community development economist for Penn State's department of agricultural economics and rural sociology, hopes the process will help Warren County residents to better understand the role of the ANF. The study will look at the forest's effects on local employment and local government finances, among other things. The forest's role as a natural resource will also be discussed.

"There's no doubt that the ANF is an important resource to everyone in Warren County, and that's why it's so controversial," Shields noted. "Some residents see its timber as a lifeblood for the economy, while others see its trees as lifeblood for the environment. Our goal is to better understand its overall contribution to the region."

A unique aspect of the program is that citizen involvement is central to the process. In analyzing the ANF, citizens will be asked to develop various scenarios about future uses of the forest. These scenarios could range from a moratorium on harvesting to an expansion of the industry to alternative forest uses, such as eco-tourism.

"Because our model is quite flexible, we can examine a number of different 'what-if' situations," Shields said. "This information then gives local officials a better idea about the various choices that are available to them."

The study will be conducted over the course of three meetings. The first meeting, which is an introductory meeting, is scheduled for Feb. 6 at 7 p.m. in the Warren County Library, Slater room. Possible scenarios will be discussed at a meeting on Feb. 27 at 7 p.m. at the Warren County Library. Finally, Penn State faculty will present the results in a meeting on March 26 at 7 p.m. in the Warren County Library. All meetings are free and open to all persons.

Because this is a three meeting process, participants should plan to attend each session. For more information and registration information, contact Adam Downing at the Warren County Extension Office (814) 563-9388 or visit the Website, http://cimpsu.aers.psu.edu.

cided to write an advertisement about agriculture in general."

Since Hostetter was not planning on writing the ads, he was surprised when at the next board meeting members liked his examples and decided to use his ads.

"We decided to go ahead and get more written for Earth Day and ag days," said Hostetter, who sent the ads to the state farm bureau for final revisions. At the board meeting members also decided to pursue sponsorship options to finance the advertising. Now half of the cost, estimates Hostetter, is paid by agriculture businesses.

The ads are aired on radio stations WLBR and WQIC, which cover Lebanon and reach into surrounding counties. Two radio personalities from the stations read the advertisements.

Each station airs nine 30-second commercials per week for a 13-week time slot. Every two to three weeks the content of the commercials change.

The contract is not for 13 consecutive weeks, so a few commercials are saved for fall messages which address Thanksgiving and harvest issues and safety.

An additional six spots per station were given to the commercials since they also qualified as public service announcements. The adult contemporary AM and FM stations air talk radio and soft rock.

Hostetter found his inspiration in quotes which he has written down in the past, and "issues that I feel strongly about," he said. His wife also helped in editing and giving her opinion on the commercials.

"The county farm bureau's bottom line is from the beginning to promote agriculture in a positive way. People's ignorance toward agriculture is dangerous," he said. "Farmers are in the minority, and nonfarmers need to understand what farmers contribute to society because public opinion controls legislation. That affects how we can farm. We need them (nonfarmers) on our side.

"My message to farmers would be to be positive and emphasize the facts about what a good job we're doing of providing food for everyone to live and be healthy."

The commercials remind the public that they have to work only 38 days to pay for one year's supply of food, and that the average farm feeds 129 people a day.

"Without the fertile land, farmers could not raise their crops to feed people and animals.

Farm Bureau's 'Thank A Farmer' Campaign Hits The Airwaves

Farmers have been called the 'first environmentalists.' They are very concerned about environmental issues — it is how they make their living," states one commercial.

The project has branched into other avenues to advance agriculture's image as well. While he researched information at the local library, Hostetter noticed the lack of quality, up-to-date books which addressed farming.

Consequently the Lebanon County Farm Bureau purchased 18 children's books to donate to the Lebanon Community Library to fill the need for agriculture literature. The books will be distributed to five other libraries in the Lebanon area.

Hostetter, who is the third generation farmer on the Lebanon farm, is farming 150 acres of corn, hay, and soybeans with his father. They have 55 cows and raise their own replacement heifers. His wife Kathy grew up on a pig farm in nearby Annville.

Greg Hostetter and wife Kathy, Lebanon, farm 150 acres of corn, hay, and soybeans, have 55 cows, and raise their own replacement heifers. Greg's efforts have led to not only radio advertisement spots but also the county farm bureau's donation of agriculture literature to the local libraries.

INVESTMENT OPPORTUNITIES IN RUSSIA FOR THE AGRICULTURE INDUSTRY

The globalization of agriculture is one of the biggest challenges agriculture continues to face. Future growth in international markets shows promising signs for U.S. agriculture, which produces more than half of the world's food production, while providing a quarter of the world's total agricultural exports.

Our country's population spends between 10-11 percent of its household budget on food. This helps illustrate enormous potential for food exports to developing countries such as Russia, which spends between 80-90 percent of its household budget on food and has a market of 150 million customers.

Russia's economy is showing a positive growth trend with a new measure of stability after nearly a decade of an unstable economy. Their import market is growing and shows signs to possibly repeat its 1994 growth pattern, when it became the fastest growing food market in the world. Thanks to high oil prices, Russia expects a seven percent annual growth rate in 2001.

The Ruble devaluation has dramatically lowered local business costs. Foreign direct investment from the European Union is growing, which will continue to help strengthen Russia's economy. The administration of President Putin has declared its intention to improve the business climate and seek more foreign investment.

The third-quarter report for the 2000 U.S. agricultural exporters to Russia is $120 million, from which poultry encompassed a 70 percent share. There are signs that Russia's imports may expand past the single commodity stage. This may include niche markets in the food processing industry. Multinational food processors are sourcing more raw materials locally. Russia is likely to regain its place as a strong and dynamic market for U.S. agricultural and food exports because the limited capability of Russia's agricultural industry to meet their domestic demand for food products.

To better inform the agriculture industry and other interested businesses about the opportunities and benefits of exporting to Russia, The Lancaster Chamber of Commerce and Industry will be hosting an informative seminar, "Investment Opportunities in Russia for the American Agriculture Industry," Friday, March 16 from 1 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. This seminar is coordinated by the USDA and the Pennsylvania Russia Business Council and sponsored in part by the South-central Pennsylvania International Network (SPIN). The event will present information on the current Russian agribusiness market and how Mid-Atlantic area businesses can safely explore these opportunities.

The seminar is ideal for any businesses that offer products or services related to agriculture, businesses that are interested in the Russian market, or individuals interested in investment opportunities in Russia. Representatives from the USDA along with selected technical experts from the field will be present to discuss these many opportunities.

Following this seminar, the USDA and U.S. Agriculture International Development (USAID) will sponsor a trade mission to Russia (specifically Rostov, Samara, and Lipetsk) to explore new trade opportunities. These agencies have worked for several years to pave the way for U.S. investment and trade in selected Russian regions.

The cost of the seminar is $35 for Lancaster Chamber and PRBC members and $45 for non-members. To register or for more program details, visit the Chamber Website at www.lancaster-chamber.com or contact Brent Landis at (717) 397-3531, ext. 134, or e-mail blandis@lcci.com. Penn State Dairy Housing Plans: Second Edition

ITHACA, N.Y. — Good dairy housing provides animals with a clean, dry, and comfortable area for resting, eating, drinking, and exercising. In addition, it is cost-effective to build and maintain, provides safe and efficient working conditions for caretakers, and protects the environment.

Penn State Dairy Housing Plans, NRAES-85, (originally published January 1998), offers 29 plans developed by faculty and staff of the Department of Agricultural and Biological Engineering at The Pennsylvania State University and Penn State Cooperative Extension. The plans provide information that can help plan a more successful freestall barn, heifer barn, or dry cow and maternity housing facility.

A revision of Penn State Freestall and Heifer Housing Plans (1994), this 106-page publication offers 12 freestall housing plans, six heifer housing plans, four dry cow and maternity housing plans, and seven plans for details and components. For this edition all plans have been revised to incorporate the latest recommendations for freestall design, ventilation, and cow movement. Also in this edition are introductory discussions for each section and a list of suggested readings.

The freestall section offers plans for various two-row, three-row, four-row, and six-row freestall barns. Included in the heifer section are plans for bedded pack housing, counter-slope housing, single-slope housing, and three types of heifer freestall barns. The section on dry cow and maternity housing contains ideas for housing dry cows in bedded pack groups, multiple pen barns with drive-though feeding, pre-fresh/maternity pen areas, convalescence areas, and post-fresh housing facilities.

Included in the detail and components section are sidewall curtains/drainage, watering locations, floor surfaces, feed barriers, freestalls, and ventilation openings. The plans are drawn for specific numbers of animals, but in most cases they can be changed to accommodate the numbers of cows or heifers needing housing.

It is available for $15 per copy (plus shipping and handling) from NRAES. For more information or a free publication catalog, contact NRAES by phone at (607) 255-7654, by fax at (607) 254-8770, or by e-mail at nraes@cornell. Visit the Web site at www.nraes.org.

First Growing Smarter: Land Use In Pa. Conference Scheduled

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Lt. Gov. Mark Schweiker recently announced that the Governor's Center for Local Government Services will host the first-ever "Growing Smarter: Land Use in PA Conference" from Sun., March 18, to Tues., March 20, at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center.

"Land use is an issue that affects every Pennsylvanian — whether you live in one of our Commonwealth's bustling cities, a suburb on the rise or a quaint small town," said Lt. Gov. Schweiker, who chairs the state's Local Government Advisory Committee.

"Thanks to the "Growing Smarter" land-use laws Gov. Ridge signed last year, Pennsylvania is a leader among states for promoting sound land use. But only by working together can we achieve our full potential.

"By coming together at the "Growing Smarter: Land Use in PA Conference,' participants will join in an historic opportunity to discuss sound land-use practices and how we can best plan for the future. I personally encourage not just public officials but all citizens interested in land use to register for this important event."

The conference will feature prominent speakers, more than 50 discussion sessions and more than 50 exhibitors.

Keynote speakers include City Councilman David W. Crockett of Chattanooga, Tennessee ("Chattanooga: Urban Revitalization Success Story"); Edward T. McMahon of The Conservation Fund ("The Dollars and Sense of Growing Smarter"); and Mayor Joseph P. Riley Jr. of Charleston, South Carolina ("The Revitalization of a City: Charleston, South Carolina").

The concurrent sessions are categorized into eight tracks: farmland and agriculture; green communities (sponsored by the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection); greenways and open-space conservation; historic preservation; housing and community development; infrastructure and growth; perspectives on land-use policies; and zoning techniques.

Anyone interested in receiving a conference brochure and registration form may contact the event coordinator at 1-800-822-3063, visit the PA PowerPort at www.state.pa.us or visit www.dced.state.pa.us. Registration forms must be received by March 9 (registrations received by Feb. 23 will qualify for an early bird rate).

In June 2000, Gov. Ridge signed two "Growing Smarter" land-use bills he called for to make the most dramatic changes in state land-use laws in more than 30 years. Gov. Ridge was cited as a national leader in addressing the "Growing Pains" of sprawl by a publication from the National Governors' Association's Center for Best Practices.

Gov. Ridge, during his budget address to the General Assembly earlier this month, announced his proposal to invest $4.6 million for the continuation and expansion of the "Growing Smarter" initiative.

The $4.6 million in this year's budget will help to: expand the Governor's Center for Local Government Services' sound land-use initiatives and respond to the recent amendments to the Municipalities Planning Code under "Growing Smarter"; further develop and strengthen planning capabilities at the county and multi-municipal level through technical assistance and land-use planning grants; strengthen interagency communication and coordination; and develop an electronic clearinghouse for land-use resources.

The second annual report on land use from the Governor's Center for Local Government Services, which is under the Department of Community and Economic Development, was recently sent to Gov. Ridge and is available on the PA PowerPort, www.state.pa.us, or directly at www.dced.state.pa.us.

Professional Dairy Managers Have A Lot To Talk About

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The Professional Dairy Managers of Pennsylvania will hold their next membership meeting in State College on March 15.

The meeting will be held at the Knights of Columbus Hall in State College and is geared to current members as well as those producers who are interested in exploring the benefits of membership in Professional Dairy Managers of Pennsylvania.

The Professional Dairy Managers, founded in 1994, began as a discussion group to address the educational needs of progressive producers. Over the last few years, the Professional Dairy Managers have become the leading organization for dairy in Pennsylvania. Since its inception, the Professional Dairy Managers, often referred to as "PDMP," have kept their focus on education for the members.

The founding members recognized that progressive dairy producers in the state did not have a forum in which they could learn more about the latest technology and techniques in order to remain competitive and profitable. The membership meetings for the Professional Dairy Managers have centered on exploring new technology and learning from other progressive producers.

Individuals who belong to PDMP continually express their appreciation for being able to socialize with other positive, progressive dairy producers. This socialization and networking provides opportunities for producers to explore new ideas and ways to conduct their business.

"Producers who are a part of PDMP are businessmen, they have a strong desire to improve their business and managerial skills," said Dennis Peckman, "I enjoy learning from other businessmen like myself." In addition to focusing on the educational needs of the members, PDMP meetings provide experiences that foster problem solving skills and learning opportunities that enhance one's ability. Dan Mains, President of PDMP expresses that "PDMP encourages each of us to think outside the box."

In addition to providing learning opportunities and networking for its members, PDMP has a growing list of accomplishments for the organization. PDMP is developing partnerships with universities and colleges in Pennsylvania that have an agricultural teaching component to expand undergraduate education and provide on farm learning opportunities for students.

Initially, PDMP has developed programs such as internships, externships, and SWOT team analysis for students at Pennsylvania State University on PDMP farms. These partnerships will enhance the educational opportunities that students receive and allow for real life classroom teaching experiences. Ultimately, the goal for PDMP is to encourage individuals to seek herd manager positions on PDMP farms.

The establishment on an education committee assists in formalizing the relationships with the educational institutions. Tom Craig, chair of the Education Committee reports, "our primary objective is to partner with PSU and Delaware Valley to support dairy education programs and facilitate practical approaches of delivering educational principals on farm." The education committee has also established a scholarship program for undergraduate students who have completed an internship on a PDMP farm.

"Summer semester 2001, we expect seven students to intern on PDMP farms, those seven students will compete for the scholarship dollars," said Tom Craig.

A membership committee, chaired by Cathy Haughwout, has also been formed within PDMP. The membership committee has the primary responsibility of increasing membership. The current membership within PDMP represents 373.5 million pounds of milk. In Pennsylvania we have a total of 616,000 cows that produce 10,931,000,000 pounds of milk.

Although PDMP represents a large portion of the total milk in Pennsylvania, there are more dairy producers that could benefit from PDMP. In addition to increasing membership, the Membership Committee assists in promoting membership meetings, stresses the benefits of membership and identifies the needs of the members.

To receive additional information about the membership meeting on March 15 for the Professional Dairy Managers of Pennsylvania, contact Tammy Perkins at (888) 373-7232 or e-mail at tap10@psu.edu.

The clones are result of a research agreement between Futuraland and Advanced Cell Technology (ACT), a Massachusetts company with a number of patents pertaining to cloning technology. Wiles plans a consign a clone due in August to the sale.

Ron Gillespie of ACT will be speaking at the Maryland convention, March 16. He will explain the cloning process used to produce the clones, how cloning may be used by dairy producers and possibly impact their business, and introduce Cyagra. Gillespie is vice president of marketing of this subsidiary of ACT.

Pennsylvania Continues To Lead Nation In Farmland Preservation

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Recently 2,844 acres in 10 counties were approved for preservation, continuing Pennsylvania's commitment to remain the nation's uncontested leader in farmland preservation.

Pennsylvania now has preserved 51 farms totaling 5,390 acres in 2001.

"We're on pace for another record year for farmland preservation in Pennsylvania," Secretary Hayes said. "Pennsylvania has some of the most productive farmland in the world. That's why we are working aggressively to protect the farmland we have.

"Pennsylvania makes products for the planet. And we need to maintain our ability to feed, clothe and shelter the residents of the Commonwealth and people around the world.

"In Pennsylvania, we're preserving farmland at a rate faster than any state in the nation. With support from Gov. Ridge's 'Growing Greener' initiative, and through the hard work of state and county farmland-preservation board members, Pennsylvania is going to continue its commitment to the preservation of our strong, proud agricultural heritage."

During his budget address earlier this month, Gov. Ridge noted that Pennsylvania recently was rated the number one state in the nation for farmland preservation. The American Farmland Trust selected Gov. Ridge to receive the National Achievement Award for Pennsylvania's "remarkable accomplishments."

Since 1989, Pennsylvania has protected more than 1,500 farms, totaling more than 180,000 acres — more farms and more acres preserved than any state in the nation. And 67 percent of that farmland was protected during the Ridge Administration.

Last year was a record-breaking year in farmland preservation with 33,270 acres and 311 farms preserved.

To continue Pennsylvania's nation-leading pace of farmland preservation, more than $70 million in county and state funding has been proposed for the upcoming year, including more than $20 million as part of the "Growing Greener" initiative.

At nearly $650 million over five years, "Growing Greener" is Pennsylvania's largest-ever environmental investment.

Created in 1989, the Pennsylvania Farmland Preservation Program is committed to the preservation of Pennsylvania's farmland. Through the purchasing of development rights, referred to as easements, the Farmland Preservation Program preserves farmland for future generations.

The following is a list of state easement purchases by county:

Berks County:

- Amy Bennetch, Marion Township, 76 acres,$152,000;
- Richard and Julie Gangaware, Longswamp Township, 58 acres, $116,800;
- Arlan and Jane Krick, Perry Township, 72.8 acres, $145,600;
- Mark and Tammy Landis, Tulpehocken Township, 98 acres, $196,600;
- Pearl Miller, Tulpehocken Township, 195 acres, $389,600;
- Charles and Arlene Savidge, Longswamp Township, 113 acres, $262,200;
- Ralph and Carol Jean Stoltzfus, Caernarvon Township, 170 acres, $340,400;

Bucks County:

- Harry Rosenberger, Hilltown Township, 285 acres, $1,920,510;

Erie County:

- Allan Bartko, Elk Creek Township, 101 acres, $123,901;

Lackawanna County:

- E. Beth Seymor, Benton Township, 98 acres, $139,384;

Lancaster County:

- Carl and Erma Herr, West Lampeter Township, 61 acres, $176,581;

Susquehanna County:

- Andrew Shamro, Herrick Township, 231 acres, $171,021;

Union County:

- Mary Bingaman, East Buffalo Township, 153 acres, $172,913;

Westmoreland County:

- Joann and Welty Keenan, Hempfield Township, 130 acres, $233,967;

York County:

- Roy and Lisa Jackson, East Hopewell Township, 232 acres, $286,562; and
- Roy and Lisa Jackson, North Hopewell Township, 125 acres, $188,771.

Under the County Easement Purchase Program, the Pennsylvania Farmland Preservation Board approved the preservation of 641 acres in Chester and Lancaster counties.

For more information on the Pennsylvania Farmland Preservation Program, contact the Bureau of Farmland Preservation at (717) 783-3167, or visit the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's homepage through the PA PowerPort, www.state.pa.us, or directly at www.pda.state.pa.us.

Panelists: Changing Dairy Operations? Do Your Homework

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Dairy producers who want to expand should probably first make a "gut check," according to several producer panel members.

Glenn Moyer, who raises heifers under contract near Telford, said producers should check their "attitudes" before deciding to expand or to change the nature of their dairy operations.

"There is more damage done by pessimism and bad alliances — they become the biggest deterrent to success," he told about 150 dairy producers.

Moyer, along with several other dairy farmers, spoke Tuesday at the second Penn State-sponsored Lancaster County Dairy Days at the Farm and Home Center.

Bob Kauffman, Quarryville, who plans to gradually phase out of the business, spoke about what those "bad alliances" can mean when it comes to finding someone to operate the dairy.

"The first mistake was that I got the wrong people," Kauffman said. "I did not do my homework. It makes for a long day when you try to work with people you cannot work with."

Glenn Moyer, panelist at far right, warned about forming "bad alliances," and the importance of knowing your customers. Other panelists included, from left, Galen Kopp, Lebanon County agent, and Jason Glick.

For some, there are other hurdles. Jason Glick, who milks cows south of Whitehorse, said he always enjoyed taking care of cows.

But on one farm that he was renting, the farm owner switched to organic production, and decided to rent another dairy facility.

Glick now manages a 78-cow tiestall and milks 61. He raises his own replacements but purchases forages from the landlord. Glick pays for his own electric, labor, and rent.

The forages are not up to par, but he intends to monitor them closely for improved dry matter and other qualities.

A panel moderator, Galen Kopp, boards heifers for a company that does embryo work. Kopp, who has been in the business since 1980, boards the heifers to about 800 pounds, or 15 months, and watches heats 30 minutes a day, he said.

"I do that very faithfully, every day," Kopp, Lebanon County livestock agent, told the producers. "I enjoy doing it. I am intimately involved in farm operations every day."

A grazier panel included comments about the benefits of grazing and how young farmers can utilize the methods in their own operations.

Arden Landis, Kirkwood, has been rotationally grazing since the mid-'90s. In July 1999, he began producing organic milk, something that took him four years to do.

Landis said all his calves are born in the spring — March, April, and May — what he calls an "easy way to manage."

He said about grazing, "There's no bedding, no hauling manure, and I can take the grain and hay to them." None of the heifers see any grain until they are moved into the milk string.

Many farmers provided tips about considering either expanding their operations, adopting grazing in some ways at the farm, changing the nature of their dairy farm, or simply transitioning out of the business.

> He would tell people he was a farmer, and they would respond, "yes, but what is your day job?" Moyer said. "That is pathetic."

Kauffman, producer from Quarryville who has worked toward transitioning out, offered several tips from his experiences.

"In this area, you have a lot of young farmers who are interested in starting dairying," said Kauffman. "They're mainly Amish. I know there is interest in starting this way."

He offers these pointers:

- Number 1 and 2, do your homework. Check out the applicants. "You can't simply wash them away or spray to get rid of them," he said.
- Number 3, you can't be selfish. If possible, keep housing for dairy producers to live at the farm. And be financially sound or have part-time income.
- Number 4, give and take. "I've had great experiences with farmers and extension," Kauffman said about the groundwork laid for good forages and operating methods.
- Number 5, don't charge top price for all your forages. Set the price for corn silage. "Your dairymen have to have a constant, even price." Use forage testing for DM on haylage pricing.

Kauffman said he supplies the buildings, real estate repairs, and 50 percent of breakdown on equipment. He pays for equipment "deterioration" but not for operator wear and negligence. He also pays all real estate taxes and insurance. Kauffman also hauls manure and mows the meadows.

"Remember, this is a business venture," he said, "but we both have to have respect and concern for each other."

Glen Moyer, who grew up on a farm, said his family sold the farm when he was 16 and he became a "suburbanite for the next 16 years." But after watching kids skate on the sidewalk in suburbia, he remembered his roots growing up on a beautiful farm and had a "dream of returning,"

So he moved to a 12-acre farm in 1985. He used the "Ben Franklin" balance sheet, with a column of plusses and another of minuses, to gauge the risks verses benefits of the farm.

But with 12 acres, he said, what could you do? "And with no money, what could you do?"

He would tell people he was a farmer, and they would respond, "yes, but what is your day job?"

Moyer said, "That is pathetic," he said, that people would ask that question. For an industry that does the most respected job of feeding the people, more should be done to allow farmers to make a living on the farm.

The first year, the farm grossed about $1,000 a year in receipts. Now they do that in about a day's time.

But getting there wasn't easy. After many attempts, including advertising in dairy publications, he finally found a large dairy that needed heifer raising. Now Moyer raises calves under contract in a profitable way.

Moyer said the mortality rate on his calves runs about 1 percent, and the acceptable mortality rate on contract is 4 percent. "After that, I'm responsible," he said. "But it's been a long time since I bought a calf."

Moyer has about five clients.

The biggest problem that many producers face, Moyer said, is "fear of failure."

He said, farmers "fail to take even the first step. But you should go out and try it and learn from rejection and proceed. Proceed from what we learn until every day, things begin to work better."

Moyer noted the importance of managing risk. Calculate the risks and eliminate as many as you can.

He said, "You have to love calves. If you do not get along with calves, forget it. You have to enjoy what you're doing."

> "The first mistake was that I got the wrong people. I did not do my homework. It makes for a long day when you try to work with people you cannot work with."
> Bob Kauffman
> Quarryville

His pointers:

- Do the research on the facilities and the work involved.
- Research your customer base. "There's nothing worse than forming an alliance with the wrong people," Moyer said.

David Williams, Lebanon, said that using grazing, he still gets good milk production. He milks three times per day and feeds TMR. Williams uses BST.

Some producers worry about drought affecting grass. But Hurricane Floyd broke the 1999 drought that September, and the grass recovered nicely, and it looked like spring.

But for new farmers, make use of the facilities to some degree and adopt some grazing techniques on a gradual basis.

Arden Landis, Kirkwood grazier, already has reached some goals in a gradual way. His big goal is to manage about 100-120 cows with him and his wife. "We're doing as little cropping as possible," and making no forages at all in the spring.

His suggestions:

- Raise the amount of animals to the maximum. Landis uses, as a gauge, one animal per acre.
- Organic dairy farming, with some preparation, can net good premiums.

David Stoltzfus, Leola, has 70 acres and 60 cows and believes that good facilities contribute in a big way to production.

He uses BST and milks every 10 hours.

(Turn to Page A32)

There is no one recipe for success, according to Paul Craig, Dauphin County agent, at far left. In center is Dave Williams, Lebanon dairyman and Arden Landis, grazier from Kirkwood.

Changing Operations

Mike Brubaker, dairy producer from Mount Joy, employs about 6-7 full-time. The labor management issue is one of the biggest adjustments the farm had to make.

Stephen Hershey, producer from Elizabethtown, said that managing "people personalities" has been a challenge. They care for about 160-170 cows and milk three times per day.

Hershey pointed out the importance of trusting your employees, because that's why you hired them, to get the work done.

Paul Craig, Dauphin County agent and panel moderator, pointed out there is no one recipe for success.

• Hidden View Holsteins, Tim and Theresa Kissling, Robensonia. The Kisslings milk 70 cows that average 28,200 pounds of milk with 1,004 pounds of fat and 868 pounds of protein. They have a 107.0 BAA score and market many bulls each year to the studs. Their herd is made up of primarily two cow families with five excellent and 24 very good cows. Recently, they completed the construction of a slatted-floor freestall barn for heifers.

• Skyline Acres, Inc., John and Donna Hicks and family operate this 400-cow dairy in Bernville. They expanded their dairy operation from 160 to their present size about three years ago. The Hicks milking center is a D-12 parallel (expandable to D-18). They farm 700 acres of corn and alfalfa. The Hicks operate the dairy with three of their children and some hired labor.

• Vista Grande, David and Phoebe Bittler, Fleetwood, milk 70 cows averaging about 25,000 pounds of milk with 910 pounds of fat and 800 pounds of protein. The Bittlers have a long history of breeding cows for type and longevity and have a 108.6 BAA score. They recently had six cows with 200,000+ lifetime milk. A unique feature of this dairy is their 82-stall tiestall barn with waterbed mattress, new lighting, and water systems.

The tour will be leaving at a 8 a.m. from the Cross Keys Motor Inn in Cross Keys at the intersection of Rt. 30 and Rt. 94 and returning at approximately 6 p.m. Cost for the tour, including bus and lunch, is $15 for adults and $7. for juniors, 4-H and FFA members.

For more information and to register for this tour, call Carol Nell at (717) 334-1026 or Kevin Holtzinger at (717) 259-7211 by March 26.

Lancaster Farmland Trust To Conduct Three Seminars

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Lancaster Farmland Trust will host three seminars for Lancaster County farmers. All of the seminars are free, and lunch will be served after the presentation. Advance registration is required.

The first of the seminars, scheduled Thursday, March 22 from 10 a.m. until noon at the Farm and Home Center, Lancaster, is entitled "Stream Bank Fencing: New Benefits for Farmers." The seminar, presented by Chesapeake Bay Foundation representative David Wise, will include stream bank fencing options, new incentive programs, a slide show, and a question and answer session.

Chuck Fisher and Dave Weidman, both certified financial planners (CFP) with American Express Financial Advisors, and Jay Clark, of James Clark & Associates, will present two seminars on financial and tax planning for farm families. The first workshop, scheduled Thursday, March 27, from 10 a.m. until noon at Kinzers Firehall, Kinzers, is geared toward Plain Sect farm families. Information will be presented about the different financial and tax planning needs of those farmers who file 4029s. The seminar will include information on farm transition and installment sales, federal income taxes, gift and estate tax issues, like-kind exchanges, clean and green, and farmland preservation.

The second workshop, entitled "Financial and Estate Planning for Farm Families," is scheduled Thursday, March 29, from 10 a.m. until noon. The seminar, at the Farm and Home Center, is designed for Lancaster County farmers interested in learning the role farmland preservation plays in passing a farm on to one's children. The presenters of this seminar will use case studies of other farm families to discuss issues such as transferring one's farm, farm sales, farmland preservation, and retirement income planning.

"I learned about the new incentives for stream bank fencing at a conference recently and became very excited about helping Lancaster County farmers learn about the opportunities available to them," said Heidi Schellenger, director of land preservation at Lancaster Farmland Trust. She said, "The tax planning seminars will be helpful for any farm family that is thinking about transferring their farm, either to someone in their family or by sale."

To register, request additional information, or if you require a ride to any of the seminars, call Lancaster Farmland Trust at (717) 293-0707.

Vending Machines Moving Milk

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Milk vending machines and counter-top coolers in schools and business and industry are the subject of a pilot program among the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program, the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council Mid East and processor partner Smith Dairy of Orrville, Ohio.

The objective of the test program is to measure the impact and effectiveness of vending single serve milk in schools.

Business and industry food service locations are also being tested because they typically have low milk sales and the potential for large sales increases. Key learnings from this pilot will be shared with the dairy and vending industries and school administrators and food service directors.

Glass front milk vending machines, manufactured by Vendcraft of Cleveland, Ohio have been placed in 20 locations in northeast and central Ohio for the pilot project. Schools place the glass front vending machines in hallways, a location that makes milk available at all times the school is open. Several schools have both the glass front vending machine in the hallway and a small counter-top cooler on their a la carte line in the cafeteria.

Vending machines and counter-top coolers were also placed in business and industry locations such as the Cleveland Clinic and the Honda Plant in Marysville, Ohio. The vending machine holds over 300 units of Smith Dairy's Moovers™ in a variety of flavors and fat content. Moovers™ are packaged in single serve containers.

Each vending machine was placed with a goal to sell 360 Moovers™ each week. Initial sales results have met or exceeded this sales goal! It is noted that the strawberry Moovers™ is the largest selling item in many locations.

The next steps in the pilot program will determine how much of the milk vending volume is non-lunchtime sales and what impact, if any, does the milk vending machine have on cafeteria milk sales. The project will also compare the school's total milk volume prior to vending machines and with vending machines.

MMB Announces February Class 1 Price

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Milk Marketing Board (MMB) announced the prices to be paid for Pennsylvania Class 1 milk (beverage) for February as an average of $15.99 in the western areas of the Commonwealth, and an average of $16.48 in the central and eastern areas of the Commonwealth.

However, the price received by an individual dairy farmer will vary as the component composition of a farm's milk differs from the established benchmarks of 3.5 percent butterfat, 2.99 percent protein, and 5.69 percent other solids.

These prices include the current MMB mandated over-order premium of $1.40 per hundred pounds of milk and the fuel adjustment premium of $.25 per hundred pounds of milk.

Guidelines Address Ventilation Systems For Dairy Tie Stall Barns

ITHACA, N.Y. — Inside a dairy tie stall barn, sufficient and continuous air exchange is necessary to replace warm, moist, or stale air with fresh outside air. These two publications can help dairy producers and their advisers plan effective ventilation systems: Natural Ventilation for Dairy Tie Stall Barns, NRAES-119, and Tunnel Ventilation for Dairy Tie Stall Barns, NRAES-120 (originally published October 1998). Both are companion guidelines to Planning Dairy Stall Barns, NRAES-37.

Natural Ventilation for Dairy Tie Stall Barns, NRAES-119, is a guideline to systems using a combination of sidewall openings and ventilation chimneys, stacks, or intermittent ridge openings to allow maximum control of air quality and distribution without mechanical fans. In a naturally ventilated tie stall barn, properly sized, located, and adjusted openings use the forces of wind and the difference between inside and outside temperature to provide the necessary air exchange and distribution.

This seven-page publication outlines fundamental requirements for natural ventilation systems, covering control and operation of openings, insulation, moisture control, sidewall closures, and ridge and stack openings. Four illustrations are included.

Cows that are too hot quickly drop in milk production. Tunnel ventilation is a summer ventilation system that provides the high air exchange rates and high-speed airflow over cows that are necessary to help remove body heat during hot weather. Tunnel ventilation components include large exhaust fans along one end wall of the barn and large openings along the other end.

Tunnel Ventilation for Dairy Tie Stall Barns, NRAES-120, describes tunnel ventilation systems that can easily be installed in simple, unobstructed rectangular barn layouts, and that with additional planning and adjustment can also be installed in barns with obstructions or unusual shapes. The 15-page publication discusses designs that are best suited for two-row tie stall barns accommodating more than 40 cows.

It covers the following essential steps in developing a tunnel ventilation system: determining required fan capacity, determining required inlet size, locating fans and inlets, selecting fans, and installing fans and controls.

Alternative inlet and fan locations are discussed as well. This guideline also addresses key considerations for planning and operating a tunnel ventilation system, including preparing the tunnel ventilation system for winter, when an alternative system should be used. It includes 17 illustrations, a table of fan and inlet requirements for typical tie stall barns, and sample calculations.

Natural Ventilation for Dairy Tie Stall Barns, NRAES-119, is available for $3 per copy (plus shipping and handling); and Tunnel Ventilation for Dairy Tie Stall Barns, NRAES-120, is available for $4 per copy (plus shipping and handling) from NRAES. Visit the Web site at www.nraes.org.

Guideline For Dairy Manure Management From Barn To Storage

ITHACA, N.Y. — When considering a new or improved dairy manure management system, it is important to predict the costs, risks, savings, and operating changes that may occur.

Because there are many options, careful and objective planning is a key to success. Guideline for Dairy Manure Management from Barn to Storage, NRAES-108 (originally published July 1998), concisely reviews information essential to the planning process for dairy farmers and their advisers.

The 36-page guideline covers the following topics: planning the development or improvement of a manure handling system, getting technical information and assistance, and meeting regulations; manure characteristics and production; alternatives for manure management; options for transferring manure from barn to storage; and manure storage types and storage management. Fourteen illustrations and 14 tables are included.

Leadership for the development of Guideline for Dairy Manure Management from Barn to Storage, NRAES-108, was provided by Stanley A. Weeks, subcommittee chair of the Farm Buildings and Equipment Task Force of The Dairy Practices Council. Extension specialists, university members, industry representatives, and regulatory and milk-plant field personnel also provided their assistance and expertise.

Guideline for Dairy Manure Management from Barn to Storage is a joint undertaking by the Northeast Regional Agricultural Engineering Service (NRAES) and The Dairy Practices Council (DPC). DPC is a nonprofit organization of education, industry, and regulatory personnel concerned with milk quality, sanitation, and regulatory uniformity.

This publication is one of 61 approved guidelines directed toward proper and improved sanitation practices in the production/processing of milk and the manufacture of dairy products. DPC approval indicates review by milk inspection agencies of DPC member states and the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

Guideline for Dairy Manure Management from Barn to Storage, NRAES-108, is available for $8 per copy (plus shipping and handling) from NRAES, Cooperative Extension, 152 Riley-Robb Hall, Ithaca, New York, 14853-5701. Shipping and handling is $3.75 for a single copy within the continental United States.

CUTWORMS A MAJOR PROBLEM?

Del Voight
Lebanon County Agent

Cutworms are among the most difficult insect pests of corn to control. However, Dr. Dennis Calvin estimates that fewer than five percent of all the corn acres are exposed to high levels of the pest.

The insects overwinter as pupae in the soil and also as adults. Some adults may fly in from the south and concentrate along stream corridors.

Fields located along streams and possessing weeds are prone to the pest. Cutworms deposit their eggs in April and May. Last year they were active around April 9.

Adults tend to be attracted to trashy fields or those where green weeds are present, particularly winter annuals such as common chickweed. Newly hatched larvae feed on the weeds until new corn seedlings emerge.

When larvae are small, their feeding may go unnoticed. Damage to plants becomes noticeable when the larvae are about one-half to two-thirds grown.

If the soil is moist, cutworms cut the plants off just above ground level. Under dry conditions, however, larvae stay below ground level and cut the plants off (plants appear wilted). The cutworm develops from egg to adult in approximately two months. If the majority of larvae are 1.5 to 2 inches long, control does not help because most of their feeding is complete.

Field Sampling

Weekly inspection for early season pests should be initiated immediately after corn emergence. Inspect 100 plants at three to five locations selected at random in a field.

If field size exceeds 15 acres, a minimum of five locations (500 plants) should be inspected. When damaged plants are found during the inspection, the source of the injury should be determined (that is, locate the pest causing the problem, if possible). If the pest is found, note and record the size and stage of development (early, late, or mature larvae).

During the inspection process, record the number of plants damaged or infested per each 100 plants checked. Upon completion of field inspection, calculate and record the percent damage or infestation found. (Note: In case of cutworm infestations, record only plants tunneled or cut. Foliar feeding injury should be noted in comment and not included in potential stand loss count.)

If cutworm leaf feeding is observed on 10 percent or more of stand, or stand loss because of cutworms exceeds one percent, then intensify scouting to a semi-weekly interval until a potential trend is clearly determined.

The following table illustrates the point that cutworm is not a pest to be applying routine insecticide applications for control — only in 1.1 percent of no-till fields showing over a five percent stand loss.

Table 1. Incidence of black cutworm under different tillage practices.

Percent Stand Infested by Cutworms	% Incidence/Tillage Conventional	Reduced	No-till

Guideline For Planning Dairy Freestall Barns

ITHACA, N.Y. — Are you thinking about building a dairy freestall housing system? Are you expanding your operation and looking for information about freestall barns? If so, Guideline for Planning Dairy Freestall Barns, NRAES-76 (published 1995), can help you with the design, construction, and management of your freestall barn.

More and more farmers are choosing freestall housing over the traditional tie stall. Freestall barns create an environment that provides for the basic needs and behavior of a producing dairy cow. This not only allows for better cow comfort and cleanliness but also increases milk production and reduces the chance of injury to both cows and workers. The first step toward realizing the benefits of freestall housing is making sure the barn is properly built and maintained.

Guideline for Planning Dairy Freestall Barns is a 52-page publication that covers the many aspects of planning a dairy freestall barn, from the various components of a freestall housing system to designing and constructing the barn and stalls. Topics covered include construction materials, lighting, wiring, management and maintenance of the stalls, ventilation for both insulated and uninsulated barns, manure and liquid waste handling, and regulatory considerations. Thirty-seven illustrations are included in the guideline along with several freestall housing plans.

Because milk inspectors helped prepare the guideline, your inspector will be more likely to approve your barn if you build it based on the guideline recommendations.

It is available for $8 per copy (plus shipping and handling) from NRAES. For more information or a free publication catalog, contact NRAES by phone at (607) 255-7654, by fax at (607) 254-8770, or by e-mail at nraes@cornell. Visit the Web site at www.nraes.org.

Engineering Sightseer's Guide Features Numerous Ag-Related Attractions

ST. JOSEPH, Mich. — A new website that promotes engineering-related tourist attractions includes a number of destinations with connections to agriculture and food production.

The Sightseer's Guide to Engineering, which was launched during National Engineers Week, offers a state-by-state listing of more than 240 travel destinations that have an engineering story to tell. The guide can be found at www.engineeringsights.org. Each entry comes with a brief description, including an explanation of the sight's connection with engineering. Location and contact information and an interesting "Fun Fact' are also shown.

Agricultural engineers can take special pride in the inclusion of the Mississippi Agriculture and Forestry Museum: it's here that agricultural aviation is commemorated as an ASAE historic landmark. "See how agricultural engineering and aviation shaped U.S. history," reads the Guide's descriptor for the museum.

Also included is the John Deere Tractor Assembly, Waterloo, Iowa, and the Delaware Agriculture Museum and Village, Dover, Del.

Bedford Farm Bureau Conducts Dairy Day

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

MARTINSBURG (Blair Co.) — Bedford Farm Bureau experienced a good turnout for their Dairy Day.

Filled with a series of informative speakers, farmers learned how to troubleshoot and problem-solve in a discussion led by DHIA consultant George Cudoc.

Darryl Gross and Mike Hosterman, Ag-Choice Farm Credit, representatives gave a timely presentation on managing your "cash flow" for greatest returns.

Managing "reproduction" for maximum "production" was led by Dr. John Mahoney, Purina Mills Research Farm.

During the afternoon, Dr. Kevin Leahy, also from Purina Mills, delved into "so you really know what you are feeding your cows?"

To meet the nutritional needs of the cow, it is necessary for the feed to contain energy, protein, vitamins, minerals, amino acids, fatty acids, and glucose.

Forage and grains should be analyzed on a regular basis.

The largest nutrient requirement of the cow is water and the amount of water consumed is normally about four times the DMI.

If water intake is limited by facilities, placement and number of waterers, water flow of waterers, or water quality, then DMI will also be limited.

Never overestimate the protein in feed. By assuming that 24 tons of feed material has 49 percent protein when it only has 45 percent when it only has 45 percent can lower your milk production by 10 percent, or a money loss of $1,100.

To deliver a consistent nutrient package, a producer must have:

- Knowledge of ingredient-to-ingredient variation.
- Knowledge of nutrient variation within an ingredient (CP, fat, fiber, energy).
- A system able to deal with the variation.

Leahy also stressed the importance of having covered feed piles. The percentage in soy hulls can be as high as 20 percent in an uncovered pile.

In a question and answer session following the workshops, all of the speakers were available for whatever questions remained.

While several of the questions dealt with the feeding of dairy animals, the last questions dealt with something we all wonder.

What is happening with interest rates?

The panel admitted they had no magic answers to this question but believed the interest rates might go down another ¼ percent in the next few months.

Survey Finds Delaware Farmers Committed To Biotech Soybeans

NEWARK, Del. — The spring of 2000 was a period of tremendous confusion for farmers puzzled about the market acceptance of biotech foods. Yet 77 percent of soybean growers in the First State planted biotech seeds, says Dr. John Bernard, assistant professor of food and resource economics at the University of Delaware College of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

"Soybeans are a staple crop of Delaware. They provide 22 percent of the state's crop income and covered one-fifth of the state farmland in 1998," Bernard says.

"People were looking at consumer acceptance of food biotechnology. I thought it was time to survey farmers for their opinions."

According to Bernard, in 1996 soybeans had been genetically enhanced (GE) to include a gene to resist certain herbicides and these had greatly changed the landscape of U.S. agriculture. By the 1999 planting season, more than 50 percent of the soybeans grown in the United States were from the genetically altered seed, a trend that had consequences in this country and abroad.

By 1999, marketplaces in Europe and Japan were restricting GE foods, leading American growers to question whether they could sell their crops.

With the assistance of UD Cooperative Extension staff, Bernard and his research associate, graduate student Chunbo Fan, identified soybean farmers throughout the state and mailed 787 surveys in April 2000, after which results were analyzed.

"We learned that despite the controversy surrounding these crops, most soybean farmers in Delaware had adopted GE soybeans in 2000.

"This means that among those surveyed, 62 percent continued to grow these soybeans. The survey also identified another 15.5 percent who had stopped planting from 1999 and 14.7 percent who started in 2000 for the first time."

When the estimated adoption levels of farmers growing biotech soybeans in Delaware were plotted on a chart, the graph showed an "S-shaped" curve.

"For an economist, this is an exciting curve. It is the shape we talk about in theory," he explains. "The beginning is slow when just a few people try out the new product. Then people rush on the bandwagon, resulting in a rapid increase. Then it levels off, which is where we are now."

Bernard says the survey sought to understand why people planted biotech seeds. The survey confirmed that 77 percent of adopters had a high percentage of weeds on their farms and chose GE crops to reduce weed infestations. Roughly 56 percent of growers viewed GE seeds as a way to increase their profits.

Among growers who did not use the new seeds, the high cost over conventional seeds was a factor. About 78 percent of non-adopters were under contract to supply non-GE crops, while 86 percent of non-adopters said they were uncertain about market acceptance. Almost 89 percent of this group had concerns about the health and safety issues promoted in the popular press.

Among non-adopters who had tried GE soybeans, then discontinued growing this crop, 83 percent said they would plant them again if the cost of seeds decreased; 72 percent would use them again if consumer acceptance increased. No grower said he or she would not plant GE soybeans again.

"It's difficult to get a clear picture of why the farmers who didn't plant GE seeds chose not to, because many did not return the survey," says Bernard. "Cost, however, seemed to be the driving factor."

Bernard says the biggest surprise of the survey was the profile of farmers who adopted the GE soybeans.

Adopters of new agricultural technologies ordinarily are predictable by age, level of education and farm size, Bernard explains. Typically, people who adopt first are younger, with a high education, or they have very large farms.

"We did not find that in this survey, however," he points out. "Instead, we found across-the-board adoption."

"Part of the reason for this pattern may relate to the growers' source of information," says Bernard. "More than 91 percent of Delaware soybean growers said that the University of Delaware Cooperative Extension was a "very important' or "important' source of information, thus ranking extension first among all providers of information in the First State.

The survey indicated that seed companies ranked second. Soybean associations, certified crop advisers and farmer colleagues ranked approximately third as an information source.

According to survey responses, weed costs were significantly lower and crop yields significantly higher for growers who planted biotech soybeans. Because this survey reflects the harvest of 1999, Bernard says the drought factor may have had an impact.

"Based on survey results, it would appear that biotech soybeans are changing Delaware's agriculture and that the planting of these crops is likely to continue," says Bernard. "Furthermore, the survey suggests that the elimination of consumer safety concerns, and the reduction in the cost of GE seeds, will lead to further adoption in the years ahead."

Bernard has printed his findings in a booklet that he will distribute to participants and to the Cooperative Extension staff.

Dairies Can Form 'Multiple Unit' Partnerships To Stay Competitive

combining resources to create larger, smarter dairy enterprises.

It's a trend worth noting, according to the dairy specialist.

According to USDA, for 2000, about 54 percent of the milk comes from cows with more than 200 cows (up from 35 percent in 1993). Production has increased per cow on these operations — of herds with greater than 200 cows, they have only 48 percent of the total cow population, but they supply 54 percent of the nation's milk.

In 2000, 5,915 herds went out of the business. That's six percent of the entire herd number in the country in one year.

The larger dairies are attempting to reach tanker-load pickup size, and the kinds of premiums paid for that size load are "real drivers" for the industry, noted Smith.

The producers are trying to dilute the fixed assets of the larger size operations over as many cows as possible, said Smith. The cost of producing milk per cow thus drops. But with larger herds come the challenges of managing employees.

Smith noted the university gets calls from large scale, 1,000-milk supply.

To increase production, you have to either milk more cows or milk more per cow. Milking more per cow involves paying close attention to dry matter (DM) content of forages and overall feed quality for the cow.

"Increased production per cow can be one of the biggest opportunities here," said Smith.

Smith has heard from producers before about how "they're strapped" and milking cows for all they can. In the 1980s, cow production increased 2,400 pounds per cow, then up another 3,000 pounds in the 1990s, and just last year alone, increased 432 pounds on average per cow.

"We have not hit the ceiling per cow on economic production," Smith said.

To do so, producers must examine cow nutrition, watch cow comfort, manage the cow prior to and after calving, reduce heat and cold stress, watch biosecurity and udder health, improve reproduction management, and forage test regularly.

Smith mentioned how the McDonald's Restaurant company now dictates how much space must be provided to individual layers for egg sandwiches. Those types of processor mandates "will get farther," Smith said.

Dairy Team Management

At the conference, Tom Craig of Murmac Farms, Bellefonte, with an expanding facility in Zion, spoke about his 500-cow production management teams on two separate sites. They farm 2,000 acres over a 10-mile stretch.

The farm installed a freestall barn in 1992. To be viable, said Craig, it was important to expand cow numbers.

He spoke of the importance of planning, writing a vision statement, and cultivating teams. Make the teams work together as a cohesive group "heading in one direction for growth, profitability, and longevity," Craig said.

The main facilities includes 400 cows in a flat parlor, open front. The other includes 250 cows milking in a double-6 parlor.

Murmac includes 15 full-time and five part-time workers. Murmac employs six Hispanic workers.

An organization chart carefully outlines responsibilities at Murmac. Craig said the farm's long-range goals are to transition the barn building to a parlor and freestall and build the business to 1,000 cows.

Craig noted the importance of listing the goals for the organization and to meet with the teams weekly.

Successful Business Managers

James Peck, who operates a consulting business, ConsulAgr Inc., employs two and has more than 100 clients.

Clients manage a total of about 5,000 dairy cattle.

Peck, who has worked with Murmac, spoke about the characteristics that make farm businesses stand out for success.

Peck said they "grow productivity, grow people and management, develop long- and short-term plans, focus on really important things, seek and use good information, respect the basic principles of business, provide strong leadership, consider growth as an ordinary part of business, and make the best of land and equipment. They make the cows pay the bills."

Adapting To Change

Brad Hilty, senior extension associate with the Penn State Dairy Alliance, repeated a quote he learned from a Mason Dixon Farm video: "change is inevitable," Hilty said. "Success is optional."

To be profitable and competitive, producers need to take a serious look down the road, according to Hilty. "Dairy producers need to be looking at how to get 30,000-35,000 pounds per cow n the next five to seven years and 40,000 pounds within 10-12 years."

The 1960s were a time that dairy production really started to escalate throughout the country.

Nationally, average herd size remains at 100 cows. Pennsylvania is at an average of 64 cows per herd.

Production nationally stands at 17,764 pounds on rolling herd average. Pennsylvania is at 17,745 pounds. In 2000, some national herds reached, on average, more than 18,000 pounds. To herds: 26,000-28,000 pounds was common and they were doing it "profitably," Hilty said.

"The more cows you have, the 2,000-cow managers, for employees to be herdspeople. But the university can only help "background" potential employees — it can't be in the position to supply a labor pool.

Producers are demanding better labor, but there is simply "not enough people in the market who have large dairy experience," he said. "(They are) pretty tough to find."

Also, the nature of milk demand has changed drastically in 30 years. In 1970, 40 percent of the supply went to fluid milk processing, and 20 percent to cheese. Today, 29 percent goes to fluid milk markets and 49 percent to cheese.

Smith did note, however, that Kansas milk pricing is less than the Northeast. "I would like to have the nice fluid market you have here," he said.

In 1990, only 33 percent of the milk produced came from the West. Now it's about 42 percent.

Northeast producers make up about 18 percent of the nation's could someday be considered for large-scale dairy producers.

But if dairy managers want to expand the facilities and add more cows, Smith cautions: watch udder health. It's the "biggest problem by far with expanding facilities," he told those at the conference.

"We often manage by disaster rather than by prevention," he said.

Heat stress can be reduced by proper east-west orientation of facilities. Cool the cow in summer with spray on their backs, blow air over them, and evaporate the moisture. Use curtains in the winter to retain heat. Keep cows as comfortable as possible and, many dairy experts agree, cows will produce more milk.

"The number one pitfall is a lack of planning," he said. "You need to take the time to establish a business plan."

The keys: worry more about managing people, inputs, information, and capital, and you

UD Professor To Head Soil Scientists Union

NEWARK, Del. — Dr. Donald L. Sparks, University of Delaware distinguished professor of soil sciences and chair of the department of plant and soil sciences at the College of Agriculture and Natural Resources, has been named president-elect of the International Union of Soil Science (IUSS).

His four-year term as president will begin in 2002, following the IUSS World Conference in Bangkok in August.

IUSS is an international society of soil scientists from academia, industry and government. From its headquarters in Vienna, the organization, which claims more than 40,000 members worldwide, focuses on raising public awareness about the importance of soil science to humankind and on advancing the frontiers of soil science.

"I'm very pleased to be selected as president of IUSS," said Sparks. "This is an important time for soil science in society, with issues such as food and fiber production and environmental concerns facing humankind all over the world.

"While air and water quality are at the forefront of environmental concerns worldwide, we often neglect the importance of soils to the overall quality of life and the environment. About 99 percent of the world's food and fiber is produced from the land. All over the world, soil degradation is a problem, and in many parts of the globe, soil degradation is severely hampering increased food production that is absolutely necessary to meet the needs of a rapidly expanding population, particularly in Africa and Asia. In this country, some of our best soils have been lost to land development."

During his tenure as IUSS president, Sparks is looking forward to hosting the IUSS international meeting in Philadelphia in 2006, marking the first time since 1960 that this meeting will be held in the U.S.

"I anticipate great opportunities to show the kinds of educational, research and outreach programs soil scientists are engaged in," said Sparks. "Our involvement as soil scientists goes well beyond agriculture, and I am hopeful we will increase our visibility and raise public awareness to the worldwide impact of soils and the discipline of soil science."

Big Square Baler Produces High-Density Bales

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — New Holland's new big square baler, Model BB900, features an efficient in-line design and wide, 92-inch pickup width to produce large-capacity, high-density square bales.

Because of the baler's in-line design, there is less leaf loss because crop flows in a straight line, allowing the feeder to capture loose leaves and put them into the bale.

The BB900 replaces New Holland's Model 585 baler. This redesigned, heavy-duty baler comes with a choice of two bale chamber sizes. It can make 16-inch by 22-inch or 15-inch by 22-inch bales. A reliable, four-cylinder Deutz diesel engine delivers plenty of power for high-capacity baling.

The rotary feeder produces dense, well-shaped bales in all crops without the need for adjustments or optional equipment. Four-way bale tension provides consistent bale density and shape over a wide range of crops and baling conditions.

A heavy-duty SuperSweep™ pickup has the widest tine-to-tine measurement in the industry, and is ideal for wide or uneven windrows. Self-contained hydraulics provide fingertip control for tongue shift, pickup lift, and bale density, no matter what tow vehicle is being used.

The BB900 is equipped with large flotation tires to reduce soil compaction and minimize crop scuffing. The baler also features a high-capacity electrical system that runs up to eight work lights for nighttime baling.

MetaFarms Acquires Production Management Software For Hog Producers

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — MetaFarms, Inc., a leading provider of enterprise applications and business intelligence solutions to livestock producers worldwide, announced it has acquired the rights to the Insight™ production management software for hog producers from Dekalb Choice Genetics, Inc., a Monsanto Company.

Insight is a sophisticated software application for managing operations in mid-size to large-scale live hog production companies. Terms of the acquisition were not disclosed.

"We're excited about this technology acquisition," said Dr. Tom Stein, chief executive officer of MetaFarms. "It fits well into our strategy of becoming the dominant information systems provider for livestock production. Our first vertical market is the global pork industry, and acquiring the Insight™ software provides MetaFarms access to a set of producers that can benefit from our value-added consulting, enterprise applications, data warehousing, and data aggregation products."

Livestock producers use production management software to track inventory of animals, manage the process of breeding and growing animals for slaughter, monitor feed intake, project delivery schedules, and implement quality control and identify preservation programs.

"The divestiture of Insight supports our primary objective of being a leading supplier of high performance swine genetics and technology, while providing our Insight customers MetaFarms' expertise in managing information software," said Dr. Tom Kasser, Dekalb Choice Genetics general manager.

MetaFarms is a leading supplier of hosted applications, information technologies, and management consulting services to companies involved in food animal production. Strengths include deep, industry-specific knowledge; proprietary technology; best-of-class technology from key partners; and in-house consulting services.

Runners Are Available Up To 100-Foot Long

GLENCOE, Ill. — For free-stall barns, Linear Rubber's CowComfort50 runners are 6-foot wide in lengths to 100-feet, to simplify installation and minimize seams. For longer installations, optional interlocking tabs are offered.

Creating permanent flooring over existing natural soil, clay or concrete, CowComfort50 runners level the surface and the ribbed underside "works into" natural surfaces preventing sliding or shifting.

A raised pebble surface improve animal footing lessening the incidence of mastitis, and dramatically reduces swollen hocks, knee and hoof problems, injuries, and other ailments. Better traction decreases stepped-on teats.

The added comfort and insulating qualities that retains body heat increases herd health, and has proven to yield a greater quality and quantity of milk production.

CowComfort 50 runners minimize daily maintenance and cut bedding costs and its disposal up to 75 percent. Reducing dust and providing excellent drainage, these are a must for liquid manure recovery systems.

Nonporous, nylon-reinforced rubber will not absorb or retain moisture or urine. These half-inch thick runners feature a fiber inlay for added strength and durability.

USDA's Forest Service Hiring 3,500 New Firefighters

WASHINGTON, D.C. — In response to the severe fire season of 2000 and recent legislation signed by President Clinton, the USDA's Forest Service will hire approximately 3,500 new firefighters.

"In the wake of this summers devastating fire season, we are adding significant new staffing to improve our nations wildland fire suppression capabilities and to reduce fire hazards near populated areas," said Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman.

The new positions will support the National Fire Plan, which was developed by the secretaries of agriculture and interior. The plan outlines actions for restoring the landscapes and helping communities affected by this year's severe fires, reducing future impacts of wildland fires in the wildland-urban interface, and ensuring sufficient firefighting resources in the future.

Up to 1,000 of the positions will be permanent. The other jobs will be temporary or seasonal, lasting up to six months per year, with opportunities to become permanent seasonal employees. Most of the 3,500 jobs will be forestry aids and technician jobs assigned to firefighting positions. The deadline for applications has been extended to Jan. 19, 2001.

More than 84,000 fires broke out across the nation this summer, consuming about 7 million acres of public lands. At the height of the fire season, more than 28,000 people were deployed to combat the flames. Federal personnel and others from 48 states, four countries, and five military battalions battled the fires.

Applications and additional information regarding the new firefighting jobs are available on the Web at http://www.fs.fed.us/fsjobs. Individuals can request applications via an automated, toll-free telephone number, (877) 813-3476; by e-mail to fsjobs@fs.fed.us; or by visiting their local Forest Service office.

Farmers Union Asks Congress To Bolster Successful Conservation Policy

WASHINGTON, D.C. — IN a hearing recently before the Senate Agriculture Committee, National Farmers Union (NFU) Vice President for Government Relations Tom Buis told senators that agriculture-based conservation programs are, for the most part, sound policy.

While these programs are good for family farmers and ranchers, as well as rural communities, Congress needs to work at providing a level of funding that will sustain long-term success for these initiatives and more directly target compensation to family-sized operations, he told the panel.

In addition, Congress needs to implement new initiatives to address additional conservation and environmental concerns in rural America.

"Our current conservation programs have, more than at any other time, helped preserve America's soil resources, enhance wildlife habitat, and improve the quality of both the air and water," said Buis. "While they have done right by the land, we must also make sure that they do right by our family farmer and rancher. We must aggressively pursue incentives to preserve our resources. We must also ensure assistance for family-sized farms and ranches, not unneeded subsidies to large, integrated operations."

Farmers Union also supports incentives and technical assistance to encourage implementation of carbon sequestration programs to address growing problems associated with greenhouse gases. Lastly, an intermediate-term soil rehabilitation program to restore cropland recently decimated by weather, disease, or pests should be considered.

The family farmer and rancher organization also supports a number of priorities that will help maintain and improve existing conservation initiatives at the federal level. They include raising the cap on total enrollment for the Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) to at least 40 million acres, reducing the emphasis on whole-farm CRP enrollments, expanding the Wetlands Reserve Program, adding funding to the Farmland Protection Program to protect farmland from development, include endangered species habitats as a priority in the Wildlife Habitat Incentives Program, increase funding for the Environmental Quality Incentives Program, and ensure sufficient resources for Conservation Technical Assistance for farmers wanting to adopt sound conservation practices.

ROASTING IS SUPERIOR TO OTHER METHODS OF HEAT PROCESSED GRAIN
~ IT'S ECONOMICAL - The cost to operate a flame roaster is lower than other types of processing equipment. This makes roasting grain a more efficient method.
~ IT PURIFIES - Only a flame roaster can effectively remove molds and reduce toxins to tolerant levels As the individual grain rotates through the open flame, the mold dust around it is destroyed.
~ IT'S UNIFORM - Having the grain pass through the open flame and properly steeped, gives it a uniform treatment

Pa. Farmers To Meet With Representatives On Farm Issues

Dairy Compact operating in New England is a top priority. In addition, Farm Bureau's recommendations for the next Farm Bill will be discussed with lawmakers.

Congressman Tim Holden (D-6th Dist.) will be guest speaker at the Washington Tour banquet Wednesday evening, March 14. PFB President Donaldson will discuss PFB's priority issues during a breakfast meeting for Pennsylvania's congressional delegation the following morning.

Here's more about the issues Farm Bureau members will be discussing with their representatives during PFB's Washington Tour:

• Death taxes. The federal estate tax, which can be as high as 55 percent, can destroy a family farm when survivors are forced to sell off property or equipment to pay the taxes. Congress passed legislation to eliminate the so-called "death tax" last summer, but it was vetoed by President Clinton. Farm Bureau is supporting a bill to be introduced this session by Reps. Dunn (R-Wash.) and Tanner (D-Tenn.). The Dunn/Tanner proposal nearly doubles the death tax exemption to $1.3 million and cuts tax rates by five percent per year until the estate tax is completely eliminated.

Farm Bureau also supports the Dunn/Tanner provision preserving the stepped-up basis for tax calculations. Farmers keep farmland an average of 30 years, during which time inflation can increase its value dramatically. If stepped-up basis is not maintained, farmers would be subject to a potentially huge capital gains tax if they sell inherited property. Using carryover basis instead of stepped-up basis would subject a person to taxes on capital gains during both his or her's and the previous owner's ownership.

• FARRM accounts. Farm Bureau supports creation of tax-deferred savings accounts, known as Farm and Ranch Risk Management (FARRM) accounts, to give farmers a new tool to help get through years when income is down because of low prices or poor crops. FARRM account legislation has been introduced as freestanding bills, H.R. 662 and S. 313, and as part of a comprehensive agricultural tax package, S. 312 — the Tax Empowerment and Relief For Farmers and Fisherman Act. With FARRM accounts, farmers could save 20 percent of their net farm income per year in an interest-bearing account. Funds could be kept in the account for up to five years. FARRM account funds could be withdrawn at any time and would be taxed as income.

• Dairy prices. Farm Bureau is urging members of Congress to cosponsor legislation to be introduced to expand the Northeast Dairy Compact and to ratify the Southern Dairy Compact. The federal milk order system establishes minimum prices paid to farmers for milk and does not preempt the power of states to regulate milk prices above the federally-imposed minimum level. Dairy compact legislation gives states the authority to work together through a regional commission, composed of consumer representatives and farmers, to establish a price to ensure a stable supply of fluid milk. Dairy compacts are self-financed and require no tax-funded support.

The Northeast Dairy Compact, which began in six states in 1997 as the result of federal legislation, has paid more than $135 million about 4,00 dairy farmers in New England and eastern New York. Pennsylvania approved legislation in 1999 enabling the state's dairy producers to become part of the Compact if authorized by Congress. Had Pennsylvania been a member of the Compact last year, dairy farmers in the state would have received $122 million in addition income — a helpful amount during a time of low milk prices.

Farm Bureau also supports an extension of the current dairy price support program which has been prolonged on a year-by-year basis since 1999. The price support program provides a safety net for milk prices.

• Farm policy. Congressional testimony has already been gathered in preparation for writing a new Farm Bill. Current legislation expires after fiscal year 2002. Farm Bureau has requested that the next Farm Bill increase the funding baseline for agriculture programs to $12 billion per year, which will eliminate the need for further agriculture emergency spending bills. The additional money will be used for income support, conservation, research and export promotion, among other programs. Farm income support should operate on an countercyclical basis to offset swings in farm income. In addition long-term farm spending, Farm Bureau is seeking $9 billion in emergency assistance for farmers as soon as possible. Farm economists have predicted a fourth straight year of record low commodity prices.

• TMDL regulatory expansion. In August 1999, the EPA expanded its total maximum daily loads (TMDL) program to increase regulatory control over runoff from "nonpoint" sources identified as agriculture and forestry. TMDLs are the amount of pollutant a body of water can absorb before it becomes impaired. For the previous 30 years, EPA had focused on cleaning up "point" sources of pollution such as factories and treatment plants. After legislators criticized EPA for failing to adequately address the technical, financial, and scientific issues surrounding its new TMDL regulations for nonpoint sources, Congress took action last year to delay the rules until after October 2001. Farm Bureau supports legislation and regulation that encourages locally designed and implemented solutions to water quality problems. Farm Bureau supports voluntary incentive-based approaches based on sound scientific information, technical assistance to landowners, and site-specifically flexibility.

• Animal feeding operations. The EPA has proposed increased water quality regulatory requirements for CAFOs (Concentrated Animal Feeding Operations). These proposals include regulating land application of manure as a "point source" of pollution, the co-permitting of CAFOs with animal processors, and expanding the number of farms classified as CAFOs.

Hearings have been held before the House and Senate Agriculture Committees on the CAFO regulations. Farm Bureau opposes this regulatory approach to water quality protection.

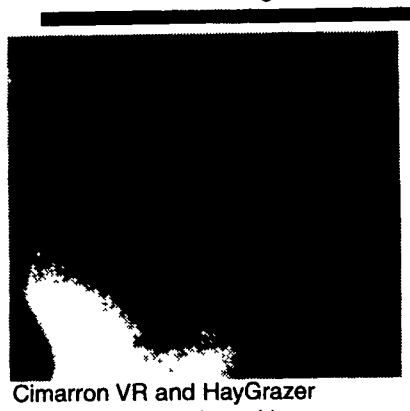
Cimarron VR
& HayGrazer Alfalfas



Cimarron VR and HayGrazer produce large buds and leaves.

Breeding for Higher Forage Quality

Larger Leaves and Finer Stems
Cimarron VR and HayGrazer produce larger leaves and finer stems than other alfalfas Larger leaves and finer stems mean more protein and higher TDN

University Testing
Year after year, Cimarron VR tops out university forage quality trials. In one 9-year study, Cimarron VR produced an average 10% higher RFV (relative feed value) than the test check out-performing "HQ" and multi-leaf varieties alike. HayGrazer offers this same great forage quality with grazability.

Better Leaf Retention
Cimarron VR and HayGrazer have better leaf retention than other varieties Extra resistance to leaf diseases allows these varieties to hold their leaves better, both on the plant and in the windrow So you get more leaves in every bale of hay Break open a bale of Cimarron VR or HayGrazer hay, and you will see the difference

The Bottom Line - Higher Profits
Higher quality hay will produce more milk and bring higher prices on the hay market So you can make more money on your alfalfa hay production.

Taco Bell, America's Beef Producers Team Up To Meet Increasing Beef Demand

MIDDLETOWN (Dauphin Co) — Pennsylvania's beef and dairy producers, through their beef checkoff, will help roll out a new steak product being introduced by Taco Bell Corporation. The new product is a premium "carne asada-style" Grilled Steak Taco, and is designed to meet the increasing consumer demand for steak.

"Taco Bell is proud to collaborate with the beef industry to bring consumers the delicious taste of the new Grilled Steak Taco with creamy lime sauce," said John Pain, VP of food marketing, Taco Bell Corp.

"The demand for beef has been steadily increasing for nearly two years and we decided that this would be the right time to offer consumers what they're demanding - with a renewed focus on quality."

The partnership between Taco Bell and the beef industry is being coordinated by the National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA) on behalf of the Cattlemen's Beef Board and state beef councils. The Pennsylvania Beef Council will partner with Taco Bell franchisees to roll-out public relations opportunities in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh.

The new Grilled Steak Taco will replace the Steak Soft Taco on the Taco Bell menu effective February 22, and will be served with cheddar cheese, lettuce, tomatoes and a tangy new creamy lime sauce on a flour tortilla for $1.49.

As part of its 2001 marketing campaign, Taco Bell will premier a new commercial for the Grilled Steak Taco that will be broadcast nationally on radio and television between February 25 and March 24. During the promotion, the beef check logo will be featured on the television commercials, as well as on in-store signage.

Farm Bureau, Ag Groups Call For Increased Funding

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Citing likely continued low commodity prices and rising production costs, the American Farm Bureau Federation and 22 other farm groups have asked congressional agriculture leaders to support additional funding for agriculture in the fiscal 2002 federal budget and ensuing years.

In a Feb. 6 letter to House Agriculture Chairman Larry Combest (R-Texas) and Senate Agriculture Chairman Richard Lugar (R-Ind.), the farm groups asked the chairmen to urge the House and Senate Budget committees to provide additional agricultural funding "equal to at least the same level of emergency economic loss assistance" that was provided for the 2000 crop.

According to the letter, the new funding request would be in addition to Congressional Budget Office projections for farm program outlays for each fiscal year.

"The U.S. agricultural economy continues to face historic low prices and producer income, as well as losses due to weather and other disasters," the groups said. "As a result, outlays under regular and emergency Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) programs have risen sharply in the past three years, to an estimated $32 billion in FY-2000. U.S. farmers and livestock producers would much prefer receiving their income from the marketplace. Unfortunately, the forecast for 2001 is for continued chronic low prices and increasing input costs that will likely necessitate further emergency assistance."

The groups urged Lugar and Combest to seek additional funding when they make recommendations to the Budget Committees regarding "funding requirements for agriculture over the next 10 years."

"We believe that agriculture's funding requirements under both the current farm bill and its successor need to be addressed in the FY-2002 Budget Resolution," the farm groups stated. "To facilitate the development of new farm legislation, it is important for the budget resolution to provide sufficient funding to enable the authorizing committees to develop effective agricultural policies. In addition to farm income support and conservation compliance, these policies include rural development, research, and export programs, as well as a program to compensate producers for voluntary conservation practices."

While the farm groups stated the request would "add significantly to projected outlays for agriculture programs," they said additional funding is needed to give the Agriculture Committees "sufficient flexibility in the budget to provide adequate economic loss assistance, and to write effective long-term farm legislation."

The additional funding would include the amount expended for emergency farm assistance in 2000, including supplemental farm program (AMTA) payments, oilseed, and dairy indemnity payments and assistance to producers of various specialty crops. In addition, the groups asked that funding "be provided for livestock disease eradication efforts and to offset the cost of compliance by the agriculture sector with conservation/environmental regulations."

Focus Attention To Calving Management

Calving time is a critical period. Mismanagement during this time can endanger the immediate health of the cow, her calf, and adversely affect the cow's future reproductive performance.

Many dairy producers have developed a system that insures prefresh and freshening cows are observed frequently and placed in a clean environment. However, in too many cases calving areas are unsanitary and stressful.

What are the consequences? In addition to exposing the calf to an unhealthy environment, the reproductive tract is most susceptible to infection during and after calving. One objective should be to minimize uterine contamination and exposure of the udder to mastitis organisms.

Research has demonstrated that cows with severe uterine infection have at least a 12 percent reduction in first service conception rate compared to cows in the same herds without infection. Similarly, cows with retained placenta have an 8 percent reduction in conception rate compared to herdmates.

Cattle that experience most any stress or problem during or shortly after calving are likely to develop ovarian cysts. Cows with ovarian cysts are more likely to have longer intervals to first service and reduced conception rate at that service.

Finally, there is good evidence to suggest that episodes of clinical mastitis are associated with a higher incidence of embryonic death. If the environment during calving contributes to more mastitis, especially coliform mastitis, then reproduction is at risk.

Here are some points to consider when evaluating calving management:

Cows should calve in a maternity pen reserved for calving that is dry and well bedded. If constructing new maternity pens, plan for excellent drainage for this area and a skid resistant surface.

Maternity areas should be located in an area where employees will frequently observe these cows.

Review with your veterinarian calving-assistance techniques and preliminary treatments for retained placenta and milk fever.

Don't be in too much of a rush in providing assistance.

Assistance should be given: if the cow fails to calve within 2 hours after the beginning of active labor; if the calf is too large for the pelvis; for abnormal presentation; or for prolonged, weak, ineffective labor.

Avoid over conditioning during late lactation and during the dry period. Overconditioned cows and heifers tend to have more calving problems, retained placenta, uterine infections, cystic ovaries and metabolic problems.

Clean bedding, well designed pens, basic sanitary procedures and a balanced dry cow and transition ration are small investments for the major payback in cow performance.

Dairies Can Form 'Multiple Unit'

more you can reduce fixed cost," he noted.

Hilty said that nationally, on average, producers have a return on assets at 7-7.5 percent. Top herds: 15 percent, and the very top, 16-20 percent.

For average herds, earnings before interest, taxes, and depreciation averaged $750 per cow. Top herds were at $1,200 per cow, and some as high as $1,800 to $2,000.

Percent equity of the business on average was 55-60 percent, with the top at 50-55 percent. The banker may own more, but there is more leverage to bring back more into the business long-term.

Operating expense ratio is average 72-75 percent, with top herds nationally at 65 percent. A good goal for producers would be 65-70 percent.

Many dairies strive to ship at least one million pounds of milk per worker equivalent. In the West, that number is more like 2 to 2.6 million pounds per worker, Hilty noted.

In the Northeast, average number of cows per worker was 40-45. In the West, it's more than 100 cows per worker.

Labor rate is, on average, $2-$2.15 per CWT, at 8-10 percent of gross income. In Pennsylvania, percentage of gross to labor is approximately 10-13 percent.

More successful businesses try all they can to "control the controllables," Hilty said. They develop strategic business plans.

York Show Brings First Signs Of Springtime

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

YORK (York Co.) — If you have found yourself watching the calendar lately, ticking off the days until spring brings colors to the landscape, the York Flower and Garden Show was for you.

For those ready to exchange a blanket of snow for the colorful faces of new flowers, the show provided an outlet for the winter-weary.

The ninth annual, four-day event held at the York Fairgrounds Expo Center offered not only eye-pleasing floral displays and attention-getting landscaping but also idea-generating seminars.

Educational presentations included giving topiary ideas, introducing bonsai, water gardening, growing and using herbs or African violets, working with dried flowers, creating containers, water gardening or even installing a backyard pond.

Other feature displays included a private collection of cacti, arrangements by Federated Garden Clubs' Floral Designs, and a Penn State Master Gardeners booth.

For those looking for new ways to display flowers, floral design symposiums coordinated and conducted by Vince Butera of Butera the Florist provided a forum for learning.

Also during the show judges examined the exhibits and display gardens. Each exhibit was judged in categories such as outstanding display garden, best use of water, best use of color, best use of hardscaping, and best use of architectural elements.

With more floor space at this show, exhibitors brought the outdoors in by offering their many garden-related crafts, garden structures, tools, lawn care, aquatic fish and plants, and herb sales.

Maxine Trone, York, a Shiloh Garden Club member, waters pots that were part of the club's "Daffodil Challenge" to force daffodils to be in full bloom during the show.

Ron Gray, horticulture technology instructor at York County School of Technology, stands on the bridge created by students. Planning and building the display was an invaluable learning experience for the 20 students who combined efforts to complete the exhibit, said Gray.

Forcing Bulbs To Bloom

Thirty members of the Shiloh Garden Club took the "Daffodil Challenge" to force daffodils to bloom at their peak during the York Garden and Flower Show. The club posted these helpful hints to force bulbs:

- In a six-inch post, plan the bulbs using good quality potting mix.
- Add ½ to one tablespoon bulb food.
- Cover bulbs with a dome of soil and firm the mix with the palm of your hand. This should prevent the bulbs from pushing out of the post as they send down roots.
- Water well.
- Chill pots for at least 10 weeks below 45 degrees. However, protect from freezing. Chill:

In plastic bag in refrigerator
In cold area of garage
In basement window well, surrounded and covered with mulch
In a hole in the garden, bury pot, surround and cover the pot with mulch.

- After ten weeks, bring indoors to a sunny area where the temperature doesn't exceed 70 degrees.
- Water as needed

Lorann Jacobs, Dallastown, stands with her original bronze sculptures. Annually exhibiting in art shows in seven states with her pieces, many of which are made for the outdoors, she has designed and produced over 1,000 sculptures in the last 20 years.

Currently she is completing a life-size fireman for a memorial park in New Jersey. The children's "Please Touch Museum" in Philadelphia will soon be hosting one of her rabbit pieces in their new building.

York Co. School Of Technology

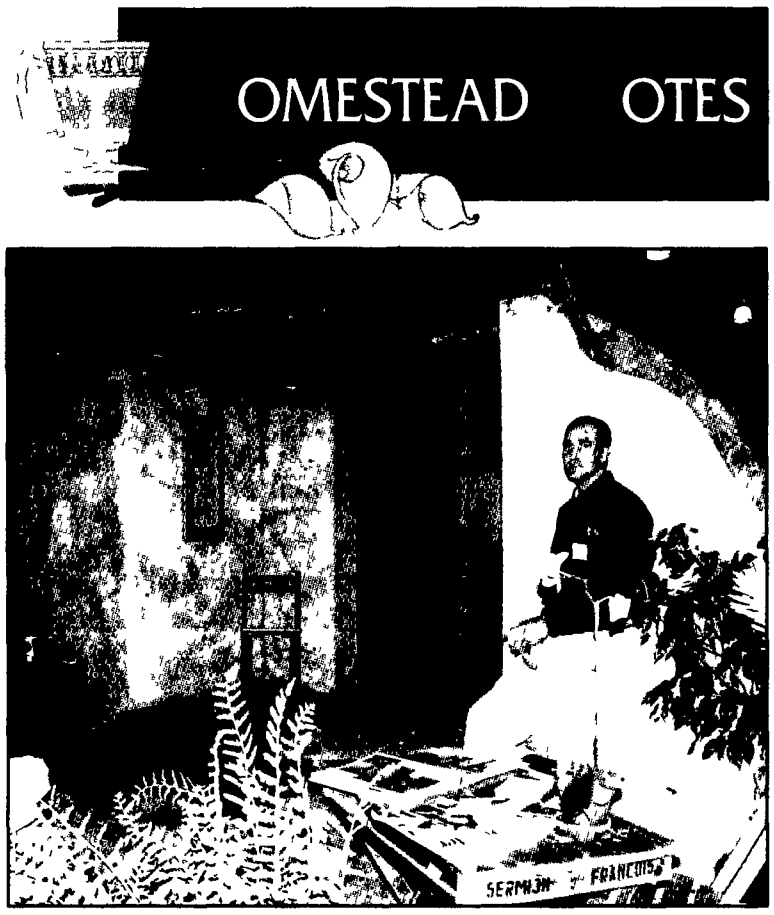
Horticulture technology students at the 1,000-students York County School of Technology, South Queen Street, York, gained exhibit experience first-hand as they completed the landscaping project on display at the show. Upperclassmen began the project at the end of January after they finished up their Farm Show display. Guided by instructor Ron Gray, 20 students made the project that included several elements.

"We knew we wanted something with water and wanted to use the fence from the Farm Show display," said Gray. "It just went from there."

Students procured masonry materials, which lined and backgrounded the exhibit, from the school's masonry shop. "We worked with what we had available," he said.

The effort involved students from several specialties, as three students studying landscape design planned the display. The interdisciplinary project proved to be a great learning experience, according to Gray.

"Now they know there's work involved in moving things around and problems setting up the waterfalls so there's no leaks. They also learned about flower identification," he said.



Brad Groff, River Valley Landscapes Inc., Wrightsville, leans against a "folly," a structure made to look run-down. Originating in the 18th and 19th century, follies were constructed by businessmen retiring to the country who built follies as a symbol of wealth.

Creating An Outdoor Living Space

Many landscaping businesses

The show provided a forum for landscapers to display their outdoor wares. Esta Hake, Lancaster, observes the budding garden lights at one of the exhibits.

took the opportunity to display their ideas for the outdoors at the show.

"Landscaping is not just planting trees, it's building an outdoor living space," said Brad Groff, River Valley Landscapes Inc.

Setting the mood for an area involves proper lighting or the addition of garden structures and accents such as a patio, gazebo, arbor, pergolas, trellis, or fence, "a lot wider range than what people think of," said Groff.

"We're trying to hit the emotional side. We'll have walkways that make you walk through the sun before you get to the shade, so when you sit in the shade you'll feel better. No one will really think about it (the logistics) but they'll notice it when they sit down," said Groff. Hitting the emotional side may also mean surrounding a patio with fragrant flowers to give the "nestled in" feeling with a parting for an outstanding view.

Creating the perfect "outdoor living space" involves several steps. "We try to get lists of things the customer wants out of the property," he said. We also look at function, whether they want to use their backyard for recreation or entertainment.

Looking at the interior of the home "to find personalities" also aids the landscapers with design. "Some people like straight and clean lines, others have free-flowing and airy interiors. It's almost like an interviewing process to determine what they want, to pull information from them to get a design they want, to meet their style."

Landscaping, said Groff, is similar to "decorating the interior of a house on the outside, making the space more inviting."

The Daffodil Challenge

Thirty members of the Shil(Garden Club took the "Daffo(Challenge" to force daffodils to bloom at their peak during the show. Each member was given three bulbs. Three different species of daffodils were involved in the contest.

Members recorded when the bulbs were planted, where they were chilled, the hours of sunlight received each day, when the bulbs were moved indoors, when the foliage appeared, when the flower buds appeared, and when they went into full bloom. The results of the "experiment," a conglomeration of sizes and stages of plants, brought a tablefull of green and yellow for those attending the garden and flower show.

The tender green stalks proved that yet again, with the added warmth, daffodils and springtime will appear . . . and that is just around the corner.

Child Care Providers To Get New Ideas On Activities

DAUPHIN (Dauphin Co.) — "New Ways to Plan Activities" is the title of the workshop being presented by Penn State Cooperative Extension. All child care providers and interested parents can participate in the workshop at 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Thursday, April 5, 2001 at the Ag and Natural Resources Center in Dauphin.

The workshop is also being conducted at 7 p.m. on Thursday, April 5 at 601 Westtown Road, Suite 370 in West Chester.

Child care providers can receive two DPW training credits for participating in the workshop. Continuing Education Credits (CEUs) are also available.

Additionally, training will be held at the Children's Library in Scranton on April 5 from 7-9:15 p.m. The fee is $4, payable at registration.

Child care providers are always looking for new ideas on what to do with the children they care for. This workshop will give child care providers an exciting way to plan daily and weekly activities.

Those who come to the workshop will see and hear great ideas and get practical suggestions for activities the children will love from expert child care providers.

The "New Ways to Plan Activities" workshop is part of a statewide Better Kid Care child care provider training program presented by Penn State Cooperative Extension and partially funded by the Pennsylvania Department of Public Welfare, and the Pennsylvania Child Care/Early Childhood Development Training System.

"O cursed white, we get a few more inches every night!"

"All this snow accumulating we find deeply aggravating!"

Can you believe it? The above is the descriptive quote about mid-to-late March in the current, 2001, edition of The Old Farmer's Almanac parked here on the desk.

So far, the "ole' bible" of rural weather predicting has been generally on track for the season, predicting a colder-than-in-recent-years winter, with snowfall and precipitation below normal. And while it did freeze up early, and seems to have lasted interminably, winter's moisture overall hereabouts has hovered on the skimpy side.

Fortunately, what snow we did have early hung around, protecting fall-planted grains and perennials like alfalfa against bitter-cold, drying winds. And the steady cold for weeks on end has kept orchard buds from stretching too far, too fast, toward the growing season, a promising start for us lovers of fresh local tree fruits.

"Cold spells in March will be interrupted by days with spring-time warmth," promises The Old Farmer's foresight. Well, gee, that's a pretty safe reckoning for just about any March here in southcentral Pennsylvania.

Those afternoons of "spring-time warmth" coaxed the early daffodils to fatten up their buds at the corner of the house. When I finally got an accumulation of leaves raked away from them last week, their anemic, pale-yellow foliage laid a guilt trip on me for not having scraped the matted mess off sooner.

Still, the almanac suggests we'd best not hide our coats, hats and mittens too far away. The "Old Farmer" (not to be confused with resident The Farmer) predicts that mid-March will bring the last of the three coldest stretches of the winter. Just thought I'd share that warning.

...Dear reader friends, I wrote the above part of this column early before daybreak, last Saturday morning, to meet a deadline early, due to having to catch a plane at daybreak on Monday for a dairy meeting. And stopped, mid-column, because I was due in the barn. Upon arrival, The Farmer informed me that weather forecaster were calling for 6-to-12 inches of that — in the almanac's words — "deeply aggravating" white stuff. Depending on the storm's track.

"Yeah, right," I chuckled, mindful of some earlier "O curses white!" warnings this winter.

Morning's outside calf feeding chores were accompanied by the high-overhead honking of an almost continuous parade of north-bound "Vs" of geese, hundreds of them in a few hours time. One lower flying flock, probably "locals," acted absolutely baffled that gentle March morning. Headed north, the formation suddenly dissolved into random factions which flapped about aimlessly for a few moments and then — I kid you not — dispersed in every direction of the compass.

Even the purposeful geese seemed to be fleeing from fickle March.

By evening, the weather warners were up to "as much as 20 inches in some places." And we were all conjuring up memories of "big March snows" of former years.

And now, I wrap up this commentary before daybreak on Sunday morning, pondering if I will indeed even get out of the garage at 4 a.m. tomorrow morning, much less connect with a westbound flight at dawn. But, by the time this hits print, however many inches of "O cursed white!" we got will be history and probably melted down into March ooze to footprint our kitchen floors and car mats.

By the way, did you know the almanac is predicting a hotter-than-normal summer?

How To Make Baby Food

Making your own baby food is easy. Just follow a few simple guidelines to make sure it's safe and healthful for your baby.

You'll need just a few items. First, you'll need something to mash the food with. A food grinder or blender is helpful, but you can also use a potato masher or even just a fork.

You'll also need storage containers, such as clean, dry jars, plastic storage containers or, if you're planning to freeze the baby food, ice cube trays.

If you've got those, you're ready to get started. First, choose which food you're going to start with. Babies usually start eating fruits and vegetables at 6 to 8 months, and meats and eggs at 8 to 12 months.

Whatever food you prepare, make it without added sugar, salt or other seasonings, or fat. Infants' taste buds are different than those of adults. Honey and corn syrup are especially risky to give to babies — they may carry botulism spores that a fully developed digestive system can destroy, but a baby's system cannot.

First, wash your hands and the equipment you're using with hot, soapy water, and dry with a clean towel. Remember, babies are more vulnerable to germs than older children and adults.

Then rinse and scrub fruits and vegetables under running water. Remove skin and seeds or pits. For meat, remove all bones, skin, gristle and visible fat before cooking.

Now you're ready to bake, boil or steam the food in a small amount of water until tender. When it's done, mash, grind or blend the food until it's smooth. Be sure to remove hard lumps.

If the mixture is very thick, add formula, water or breast milk to thin it out.

To store baby food, pour it into labeled and dated containers. Or, pour into ice cube trays; when it's frozen solid, put the cubes into a labeled freezer bag.

Be sure to refrigerate or freeze your homemade baby food until you're ready to use it. Meats or egg yolks last one day in the refrigerator or one to two months in the freezer. Meat and vegetable combinations last up to two days in the refrigerator or three to four months in the freezer. Fruits and vegetables last up to three days in the refrigerator, or six to eight months in the freezer.

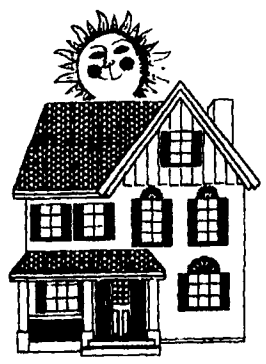
Family Living Focus



Karen Bracey

Penn State Cooperative Extension - Wyoming County Family Living/4-H Agent

Longer days and warmer sunshine frequently motivate people to renew healthier behaviors such as exercise and eating more fruits and vegetables. While this is true of all ages, if you have recently hit a milestone birthday (40, 50, 60), the interest in maintaining a certain level of health and fitness may be even greater.

The next four articles will deal with this issue and are taken from the four part learn at-home series "Your Wellness Roadmap — Health After 40."

Three Risks: Heart Disease, High Blood Pressure, And Diabetes

You inherit your risk of, or susceptibility to, disease. It can sneak up on you, especially after age 40. It's smart to start on the road to wellness before any major disease hits you. To help you plan your own wellness goals, let's review some facts:

Cardiovascular Disease

Cardiovascular disease affects the heart and blood vessels. Over 10 million Americans have it. Heart disease is the most common type of cardiovascular disease. About half a million people die of heart disease each year.

Heart disease begins affecting men around age 40. Men in their forties are three times more likely to have heart disease than women in their forties. But this is not just a man's disease.

About half of all deaths from cardiovascular disease occur in women. It begins in women about 10-12 years later than in men. More men die early from cardiovascular disease. Although women are more likely to develop a chronic heart or circulation problem later in life, heart disease can affect younger women. About one in nine women age 45-64 have some form of heart disease, while after age 65, one in three do.

High Blood Pressure Or Hypertension

High blood pressure affects nearly 60 million people in the United States, or one in every four adults. It can occur as early as age 40. The number of new cases rises as people age. In middle age, men are more likely to have high blood pressure than women. But in later years, women are more likely to develop high blood pressure.

African Americans especially are at risk for this disease, which itself contributes to the risk of heart disease, stroke, and kidney failure. After age 65, over 80 percent of African American women and 65 percent of white women have high blood pressure. After age 65, over 65 percent of African American men and about 60 percent of white men have the disease.

Diabetes (Type Two)

Non-insulin dependent diabetes mellitus, or type two diabetes, is usually discovered after age 40. Twice as many people over 65 have type two diabetes as those under 65. About 13 million people in the United States have it, but half do not know it. Sixty percent of new cases are found in women.

Approximately twice as many women develop diabetes in a year as develop breast cancer. African Americans, Hispanics, and American Indians are much more likely to develop this disease than whites. Type two diabetes contributes to cardiovascular disease and is often the underlying cause of death due to heart disease.

Medical scientist have noticed that sometimes a person will develop high blood cholesterol or high blood pressure (or both) before they develop type two diabetes. When someone has symptoms of all three diseases (high blood pressure, cardiovascular disease, and type two diabetes) at once, doctors call this Syndrome X.

When the symptoms appear together in an individual, they may spring from the same problem: insulin resistance. Insulin resistance means the cells in your body don't respond to the hormone, insulin, as readily as they should. Insulin helps your body control blood sugar levels. Weight gain appears to be one cause of insulin resistance.

Common Risk Factors

Some of the risk factors are the same for all three diseases. Risk factors (characteristics or behaviors that increase one's risk) don't necessarily cause the disease; they mean that one's chances of developing the health problem are greater. The risk factors that increase one's chances of getting all three diseases are:

- Being middle aged or older (over 40).
- Having a parent, brother, or sister with any of these diseases.
- Being physically inactive.
- Being overweight, especially if the extra fat is on the upper body or stomach.
- Eating too many calories, especially as fat.

4-H HAPPENINGS

Pennsylvania 4-H Week

WEST CHESTER (Chester Co.) — Pennsylvania 4-H Week celebrates the accomplishments of 4-H youth during the week of March 17-24. The theme for 2001, "Communities That Care," reflects the variety of 4-H programming and the diversity of the lives and backgrounds of 4-H youth throughout our nation.

Young people between the ages of 8 and 19 develop leadership, citizenship, interpersonal, and workforce skills in a wide variety of 4-H programs that fall within four major academic disciplines: biological sciences, social sciences, arts and humanities, and physical sciences.

Over 5.6 million young people participate each year in 4-H "hands-on" activities. In Chester County, over 3,000 youth completed over 5,400 projects annually. Dedicated, volunteer adult leaders (200 in Chester County) donate their time and talents to help these children, youth and communities.

The Romano 4-H Center of Chester County, located in Honey Brook, hosts over 3,000 Chester County and surrounding county families who participate in a wide variety of agricultural, home science and leadership development programs and exhibits. The annual 4-H center auction, scheduled for Sept. 29, 2001, welcomes patrons and donated items.

CHOCOLATE CHIP MINT COOKIES

2⅔ cups flour
½ teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup unsweetened cocoa
¾ cup light brown sugar
⅔ cup white sugar
1 cup (½ pounds) salted butter, softened
3 large eggs
1 teaspoon pure mint extract
10 ounces (1-¾ cups) mint chocolate chips

Preheat oven to 300 degrees. Combine flour, soda, salt and cocoa and set aside. Blend both sugars in mixer, and then add the butter. Mix well, and add the eggs and extract, blending well after each egg.

Beat until light and fluffy. Gradually add the flour mixture at a lower speed. When finished, fold in chips with a spoon.

Drop dough in rounded tablespoons, 1-½ inches apart. Bake for 19-21 minutes. Cool on racks, and store in tightly sealed tins.

Try these without the mint extract or chips, using vanilla and either peanut butter or butterscotch chips instead. Works well with airbake pans. Store them separately from other cookies, as the mint flavor is strong.

BAKED APPLES WITH MINT

4 red delicious apples
½ cup raisins
¼ cup brown sugar
1 tablespoon chopped fresh mint leaves
4 teaspoons butter

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Core apples and peel off a one inch strip around the hole on the top of each apple. Place apples in a shallow baking dish. Combine raisins, brown sugar, and mint leaves.

Fill apples with the raisin mixture. Top the raisin filling in each apple with one teaspoon butter. Bake in a preheated 350 degrees oven for 50 minutes, until apples are tender. Prep time is 15 minutes. Makes four servings.

Preparation Tip

Would you prefer to serve this pie from your own dish? Transferring the crust is an easy process with this helpful hint from the "Taste of Home" magazine. Here's how: Pull back the foil edge from the pie tin. Remove the plastic lid; set aside.

Brush one beaten egg white on surface of crust. Bake at 375 degrees for five minutes; cool. Replace plastic lid. Place the crust, plastic lid side down, in the palm of your left hand. Lightly tap the bottom and sides of the tin to release the crust. Carefully remove the pie tin, allowing the crust to rest on the plastic lid.

With your right hand, place your serving dish on top of the crust. Turn the plastic lid over in your right hand. Remove the plastic lid.

Ida's Notebook

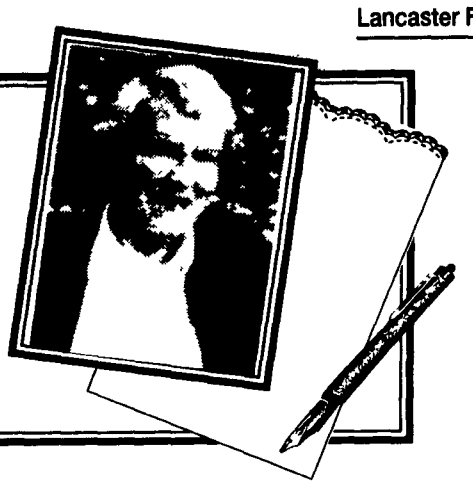
Ida Risser



If I get comments on what I have written, it is usually on the historical articles. People are more interested in what my ancestors did than in my everyday activities.

So, today in hunting up dates of my great grandmother, Elizabeth Wolf's birth and death, I came across some papers that are over 100-years-old. As I probably mentioned before, my grandfather, Benjamin Landis, was killed by a train in Lancaster in 1900. He had just delivered a load of wheat to Levan's Mill when he and his horses were killed.

What I just found was an inventory of his things and a list of his debts. He owed small amounts to trade people. Twenty dollars to Wilson Bard for produce, to Clayton Neidmyer, a butcher, $16 for meat and county tax to E. Buckwalter was $40. The funeral expenses to John Wolf for a coffin and services was $33. Can you believe that — $33.

The inventory of his 1900 machinery included a spike harrow, $3, two-horse wagon, spreader and two wheelbarrows, $12. One horse and four mares were appraised $262. Lots of bags, forks, saddle, digging iron and jockey stick were lumped together for $4. A Champion binder was $60. Five cows, two heifers and one bull were valued at $195. His wheat was priced at 50 cents a bushel and his corn at 40 cents a bushel.

One thing that I do not understand is why the widow's things were also appraised. A bed, three chairs, a bureau and carpet were only $12. A "lot of chickens" were $50, a top buggy, $20 and a sleigh, $8 and three heifers, $31.

As a result of this accident, my grandmother moved off of the farm and her 19-year-old son took over management of the farm with a tenant farmer. It was a tragic accident that affected the lives of several people for years to come.

Maple Syrup, A Taste Of Nature

There are many different kinds of trees in Pennsylvania's forests, but the sweetest tree in Pennsylvania is the sugar maple. The sap from this tree is used to make pure maple syrup.

Sugar maple trees are unique to North America and grow naturally only in the northeastern United States and southeastern Canada. In Pennsylvania, sugar maples are found mostly in the northern counties and through the Laurel Highlands. This makes maple syrup a very special product we get from Pennsylvania forests.

How It Started

American Indians first discovered how to make maple syrup many years ago.

They collected the sap in containers made from birch bark. They boiled it by filling a hollowed-out log with sap, then putting hot rocks into it.

The American Indians did not have a way to store the sticky liquid maple syrup very well, so they boiled the syrup a little longer to make maple sugar. They used maple sugar to sweeten their food and added it to cold water for a sweet summer drink.

When the first Europeans came to North America, the American Indians taught them about making maple syrup. As time passed, the method of making maple syrup improved, but the basic process remained the same. The annual tradition of making maple syrup has been a part of Pennsylvania's history for well over 200 years.

Maple Sugaring Basics

In early spring each year, maple producers, also called "sugarmakers," throughout Pennsylvania head to their woods for the start of the maple syrup season. Generally, the maple season lasts from mid-February to early April.

Maple producers drill a small hole into the trunk of the tree. This is called tapping. They insert a small spout or spile to catch the sap that begins to collect in the hole. The spout may connect to plastic pipes stretching through the woods, called tubing, or a bucket to collect the dripping sap.

The Magic Tree

The sugar maple tree is the natural resource used to make maple syrup, and maple producers need to take good care of these trees. They wait until sugar maple trees are about 10-inches in diameter (20 to 40-years old) before they start tapping them. They also limit the number of taps they put in one tree according to the size of the tree, so that it will not be damaged.

Tapping maple trees properly does not affect tree health. However, a small amount of wood damage does occur in the tree. The sap collected is only a small fraction of the total amount of sap in the tree. The small hole drilled into the tree usually heals within one or two years. If the maple trees are taken care of properly, the same tree can be tapped year after year.

Making The Syrup

Sap from the sugar maple tree is about 98 percent water and two percent sugar, other nutrients, and minerals. To make pure maple syrup, the sap needs to be boiled to evaporate a lot of the water away. Maple syrup is 33 percent water and 67 percent sugar.

The sap starts to "run" or flow out of the holes when the weather is just right. Sugarmakers like cold nights (with temperatures below freezing) and warm days (with temperatures above freezing) so the sap will flow. Once the sap starts collecting in the buckets or flowing through the tubing, it needs to be processed right away.

Sugarmakers use evaporators to make maple syrup. An evaporator consists of two or more large, specially designed pan that are filled sap. These pans sit over a fire of burning wood or some other fuel, which heats the sap and causes it to boil.

As it boils, some of the water in the sap turns into steam, which rises out of the sugarhouse. The sap becomes thicker and sweeter.

The sugarmaker has to watch the boiling sap very carefully because it could easily burn in the evaporators. As the sap thickens, it gets hotter. The sugar maker knows that the maple syrup is ready when its temperature reaches seven degrees Fahrenheit above the boiling point of water.

This process requires a lot of time and energy, because it takes about 40 gallons of sap to make just one gallon of pure maple syrup.

The boiling sap is tested with precise instruments to determine if it is maple syrup. If it is thick enough to be maple syrup, it is filtered to take out "sugar sand," which accumulates as the sap boils.

Sugar sand is just minerals and nutrients that concentrate as the excess water is boiled away. If it is not filtered out, the maple syrup will appear cloudy.

The Final Product

After the maple syrup is filtered, it is put in a container for sale, or made into other tasty maple treats. Many maple producers process their maple syrup into maple sugar, maple candy, maple cream, and even maple jelly.

Pure maple syrup and other maple products have no additives, preservatives, or artificial colors. It's all natural and some people even call it a "taste of nature."

Pure maple syrup is great on pancakes, waffles, and French toast. You can also enjoy it on vanilla ice cream, on steamed rice and vegetables, or other foods. It is a pure, all-natural product from Pennsylvania's woods.

QUESTION — C. Faus wants to know how to make homemade rice cakes. She writes they are nice for wheat-free diets but expensive to buy.

ANSWER — Dorothy Stoms, Deerfield Street, N.J., writes that in her recipe for cream puffs she missed putting in that the dough should be dropped by heaping tablespoons three inches apart on a *greased*cookie sheet.

ANSWER — In response to Holly Eshbach's question on how to keep cream puffs from deflating after they are removed from the oven, Sarah Keeny, York, PA, suggests perhaps they were not baked long enough. Sarah says they will puff up quickly, but they may not be baked thoroughly inside. She claims hers always stay round and full with extra bake time.

QUESTION — Joyce Grim, Bucks Co., writes that her church group makes candy twice a year. Often the chocolate turns white while drying. It is not placed in the refrigerator. How can they prevent this from happening?

ANSWER — For Joyce Grim from Bucks County, writes that her church group makes candy twice a year which often turns white while drying. Holley Moyer writes that they should keep the chocolate wrapped tightly and in a cool place but not in fridge (as she said). Chocolate, even when whitish is still perfectly good to use, it is not stale. It turns white because it's been exposed to air.

In addition, if any water touches the chocolate it will get white spots. Sometimes stirring in shavings of unmelted chocolate to the melted chocolate mixture helps also.

ANSWER — For Beverly Massicot, Taneytown, who requested a recipe for vanilla sauce for bread pudding, Sarah Keeny sends the following recipe:

ANSWER — Bob Snyder, Akron, Ohio, requested a recipe for hot rice. Ruth Aument writes that his description of ingredients sounds like Spanish Rice. She says this is a very simple recipe to be prepared in a crockpot or the top of the stove in a very large frying pan with a little extra water. Crock pot preparation would be best so flavors have time to blend.

Spanish Rice

1-1½ pounds lean ground beef
1 medium onion, chopped
1 green pepper, chopped
28-ounce can tomatoes
8-ounce can tomato sauce
1 cup water
2½ teaspoons chili powder
2 teaspoons Worstershire sauce
½ teaspoons salt
¾ cup raw rice (converted)

Brown beef in skillet, drain off fat. Put all ingredients in crock pot. Stir thoroughly. Cover and cook on low 7-9 hours, or high for 3 hours. If making on stovetop, stir occasionally while simmering for about 30 minutes or until rice is cooked.

ANSWER — An anonymous reader sent in the following in response to Linda Smith of Walpole, N.H. who requested a recipe for Friendship Fruitcake Starter in which the fruit ferments in the jar. This recipe does not use brandy:

Starter for Friendship Fruitcake

6 oz. can frozen apple juice concentrated, thawed
3 apple juice cans water
½ cup sugar
2 teaspoons lemon juice
1 package active dry yeast
10 ounce jar maraschino cherries and juice

Combine all ingredients in one gallon jar or large container. Stir until sugar is dissolved. Cover and let stand for 10 days (stirring twice a day) for 10 days. Use one pint to start your cake. Give rest to friends.

ANSWER — A Lancaster County reader requested recipes using chicken breasts. Thanks to David Ott, Coal Township for the following:

Charles Washington Chicken

6-4 ounce boneless chicken breasts
¼ pound sliced dried beef
2 cups mushrooms, sliced
1 can golden cream of mushroom soup
2 tablespoons butter
½ cups bread crumbs
¼ teaspoon pepper

Brown the dried beef in the butter and place it in a baking dish. Add the mushrooms and top with the raw chicken breast. The breast can be wrapped in bacon if you wish. If so, poach the bacon to release some of the fat. Next, in a bowl, place the cream of mushroom soup and thin it with a little milk or water. Pour the soup mix over the chicken, top with the bread crumbs. Bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes, or until the crumbs are golden brown.

Eva Mae Oberholtzer, Ephrata, sent in a family favorite recipe.

Chicken Breast Delight

6 boneless, skinless chicken breasts
6 slices American cheese
1 can cream of mushroom soup
½ cup milk
1 cup instant stuffing mix, chicken flavor
¼ cup butter

Lay chicken in a 9X13 inch pan. Put cheese on top. Mix soup and milk. Put on top. Mix stuffing mix and butter on top. Bake uncovered for one hour at 350 degrees.

An Annville reader sent in another recipe idea:

Crunchy Lemon Chicken

2 cups bran flakes, finely crushed
½ teaspoon grated lemon peel
¼ teaspoon salt
1 egg white, beaten
6 boneless, skinless chicken breast halves (about 1-1½ pounds)

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Mix cereal, lemon peel and salt. Dip chicken in egg white. Coat with cereal mixture. Arrange in 13 X 9-inch pan which has been sprayed with nonstick cooking spray. Bake 20 minutes or until cooked through.

Lee Laverty, Dover, New Jersey, sent in this recipe:

Chicken Parmigiana

1 lb. Cleaned and boned chicken breast
½ cup flour
2 eggs, well beaten with two tablespoons white wine (optional) or water
1 cup Italian flavored breadcrumbs.

Split breasts into serving pieces. Dip into flour, then into egg mixture and finally into breadcrumbs. Repeat one more time, only do not dip in flour the second time.

In Teflon fry pan, heat 4-tablespoon mild olive oil until hot. Add breasts and brown slowly on each side. Remove and drain well. In casserole large enough to accommodate the chicken, place ¼ cup of spaghetti sauce and spread to cover bottom of dish. More depending on size of dish.

Place brown chicken breasts in sauce and cover each with about 3 tablespoons of sauce. Cover dish and back in 350 degree oven for about 20-30 minutes or until chicken is done.

Remove from oven and place sliced mozzarella cheese on each breast (about 2 slices ⅛ inch thick). Recover and place in oven for about five minutes until cheese is melted. Service with spaghetti and additional sauce on the side.

ANSWER — David Ott also sends a recipe for Pasta Fagioli which was requested by a Somerset reader:

Pasta Fagioli

1½ cups dried white beans, soaked overnight
½ pounds pork belly or ham, diced
1 medium onion, chopped
1 carrot, chopped
1 celery stock, chopped
1 garlic, crushed
3 parsley sprigs, chopped
1 bay leaf
Salt and pepper to taste
6 ounces macaroni

Put the beans in a pan with the pork, onion, carrot, celery, garlic, parsley, bay leaf and cover with water.

Bring to a boil, reduce heat, cover the pot and simmer for 2 hours, or until the beans are soft. Put one cup of the beans in a blender and puree.

Place it back into the soup, season to taste. Add the noodles and boil for 12 minutes. Remove the pork and cut into small pieces, return to the soup and serve. Serve with hard crust bread. Serves 4-6.

ANSWER — Also, Francis Tuoti, North Salem, NY, sends this recipe for Pasta Fagioli. The recipe is from Tuioti's mother, Mary Lou Tuoti, who "was the best Italian cook around!'

Pasta Fagioli

16 ounce can of whole Italian tomatoes (peeled or crushed)
16 ounce can of cannellini beans (undrained - keep liquid)
1 cup (before cooking) Ditalini pasta (Ditalini is like short pieces of pasta tubing)
1 teaspoon oregano
4 tablespoons olive oil
4-5 garlic cloves minced
Grated parmigano cheese (best if fresh grated from a solid piece)
Red pepper flakes (to taste)
Salt (pinch or to taste)

In a large saucepan, saute the garlic in olive oil until just turning light brown. Add tomatoes, salt, pepper and simmer about fifteen minutes, breaking the whole tomatoes into smaller pieces with a fork.

Add the oregano and the beans including the liquid in the can and simmer about five to ten minutes longer (do not let the beans cook until real mushy.)

While the above is cooking, also cook the Ditilini, but again it should be firm, not soft and rubbery. Drain, but reserve about a cup of the water.

Mix it all together, and add water if the mixture becomes pasty. It should have a slightly liquid consistency.

A great variation, and a real favorite of mine, writes Tuoti, is to make Pasta Ceci, which is the same as the above except substitute a can of chickpeas for the canellini beans.

These dishes are great when heated over. Just don't overcook during the reheat.

ANSWER — For Erma Zimmerman, Williamsburg, who wanted a recipe for pesto sauce, David Ott also sends the following:

Pesto

1 cup of chopped fresh basil
4 cloves of garlic finely chopped
¼ cup of grated parmigano or romano Italian cheese
Salt and pepper
1 cup chopped fresh parsley
¼ cup pignoli nuts, chopped
1 cup olive oil

Place all ingredients in a blender with ½ of the olive oil. Blend on slow speed. Stop periodically to scrape down the ingredients that tend to cling to the blender wall. When all ingredients are mixed well, add the remaining oil in a steady stream and continue blending until smooth.

Pour the sauce over pasta, preferably use Linguini fini, (the thin linguini) which has been cooked firm. Use only enough of the pesto sauce to full coat the pasta. The rest can be saved in the refrigerator for several weeks and used on the next batch of pasta.

When saving, add a thin layer of olive oil on top of the pesto to keep the fresh ingredients well preserved.

ANSWER — Many readers sent in recipes for Beverly Massicot, Taneytown, who wanted a recipe for vanilla sauce served over bread pudding.

Vanilla Sauce For Bread Pudding

1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
1⅓ cup milk
⅔ cup water
4 tablespoons butter
2 teaspoons vanilla

Mix in saucepan the sugar and starch. Stir in gradually the milk and water. Boil one minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat, stir in butter and vanilla. Best if poured over hot bread pudding and served immediately.

An anonymous reader sent in sauce variations:

Peach sauce: substitute 1 cup peach nectar, juice, or mashed fresh peaches for one cup water.

Cherry sauce: substitute 1 cup cherry juice for one cup water

Apricot sauce: substitute 1 cup apricot nectar for one cup water.

Iced Tea Syrup

Cook three cups water and three cups sugar for five minutes until mixture boils and becomes clear. Remove from heat and add five or six tea bags. Remove tea bags after 10 or 15 minutes. Cool syrup.

If lemon is used, add the juice of three lemons. For instant iced tea, fill glasses with ice, add two or three tablespoons syrup and cold water. Recipe makes approximately 1½ gallon of iced tea.

Judy van der Wal writes that she always get compliments on this iced tea recipe. She usually doubles this recipe in the summer.

Iced Tea

2 quarts boiling water
7 tea bags
⅔ cup sugar
⅓ cup lemon juice

Add tea bags to boiling water. Allow to steep about 2 hours. Remove bags. After the water is cooled, add sugar and lemon juice.

Martha Myers, Manchester, Md., sent in this recipe, which she believes is extra-specially good. She uses a two-quart earthenware pitcher.

Iced Tea

Pour two quarts boiling water over four tea bags. Steep five minutes. When ready to serve place two tablespoons or about ½ to ¾ simple syrup (5 cups sugar, five cups water, let come to a boil and stir in fridge) in a glass. Add ice cubes and pour the tea over it.

2 cups uncooked macaroni
1 can cream of mushroom soup
¼ lb. dried beef, shredded
1 can cream of celery soup
½ lb. shredded cheddar cheese
1 small onion, chopped pint of milk mix - let stand overnight or at least 12 hours.

1 cup milk
1 cup finely-cut cheddar cheese
1 cup uncooked macaroni
3 tablespoons finely-chopped onion
¼ pound dried beef, cut in bite-size pieces
2 hard cooked eggs, sliced

Stir soup to make a creamy consistency. Add rest of ingredients except eggs. Fold in eggs. Put into buttered 1½ quart baking dish. Store covered in refrigerator at least three to four hours or overnight. Bake one hour at 350 degrees uncovered. Makes 4-6 servings.

Corn And Dried Beef Casserole

3 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons finely-chopped onion
½ cup chopped dried beef
3 eggs
¼ cup milk
2 tablespoons flour
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup grated mild cheddar cheese
2½ cups crushed corn

Melt butter in a small skillet over low heat. Add onions and dried beef and cook until onions are tender.

In a medium-size bowl beat eggs until they are thick and lemon-colored. Add milk, flour, and salt and beat well. Stir in cheese, corn and onion/beef mixture. Pour into a greased 1½ quart baking dish. Bake at 350 degrees for 35 minutes. Let stand five or ten minutes before serving. Makes six servings.

Holley Moyer sent in the following recipe:

Beef Horseradish Rollups

Cream one package of cream cheese add horseradish to taste. Smear horseradish cream cheese mixture on slice of dried beef.

Roll up beef like a jelly roll. Refrigerate. Can be served as whole "logs" or cut up into rounds. You can also vary this recipe by adding chopped olives to the cream cheese.

LEOPARD

The leopard is a large cat that lives in southern Asia and Africa It is very dangerous, but very beautiful It has soft, yellowish fur with black spots on it Some leopards are all black and are called black panthers

Leopards are usually about eight feet long and weigh about 100 pounds They are so powerful they can leap more than 10 feet in the air, and can run up and down trees very easily Because of their strength and speed, they can easily attack their prey Their spotted coats make it easy for them to hide in the bushes, and they jump out at just the right time to surprise their victim

Leopards will eat almost any animal, but prefer to eat antelopes They sleep during the day and hunt for their food at night Leopards live in the forest, bush or on rocky hillsides—anywhere they can easily hide

Is There A Health Insurance Plan To Fit My Budget?

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

Health insurance, something we think we can't live with and can't live without!

We can't always live with the high premiums and yet, we are in constant fear of some catastrophic illness or injury wiping us out if we don't have it.

Since none of us can be certain when disaster may strike and it may cost hundreds of thousands of dollars when it does, it is best to have at least a major medical policy.

If you are looking for ways to save money on health insurance, you might try any of the following suggestions.

Call an independent insurance agent and ask if they have health insurance. An independent agent will usually try to find you the best deal.

Search the net. Under healthinsurance.com, you can find which companies are available in your area. A quick call can find you a local agent and a quote.

In western Pennsylvania, Blue Cross offers two excellent individual programs including Complete Care and the Keystone HMO.

The rate for a family of three in their 30's would be $440.50 for the HMO which has a $10 deductible when you visit your primary care physician which you choose. Everything else, except prescriptions is paid at 100 percent. Prescriptions are paid at 80 percent.

For the same family, a $250 deductible, 20/80 co-insurance to $5,000 would be $285.40. Co-insurance means you pay 20 percent and the company pays 80 percent. Everything, including diagnostic work, doctor's office visits, prescriptions, hospital stays, therapy and some special equipment is included in the deductible.

Co-insurance means that you pay the 20 percent up to $5,000. When you have taken $1,000 out of your own pocket, Complete Care will cover everything at 100 percent up to $5,000.

With a little bit of calculation, one finds that the $155.09 difference in premium could be put into the bank and $1,861.08 annual difference in premiums would soon cover any deductibles.

A call to Blue Cross in the Capital or eastern areas would let you know if such products are available there.

The problem with any of these individuals policies is that they are medically underwritten. This means that pre-existing conditions are taken into account and you can be turned down for a policy.

If you have a serious problem and reside in western Pennsylvania, call 1-800-544-6679 for information on the products which are not medically underwritten.

Despite what you might have heard or read, not all HMO's are bad, Most HMO's will require you to have a primary care physician whom you pick from a list of physicians who have contracts with that HMO. You then pay a co-payment of usually $10 or $15 when you visit the doctor.

Some HMOs require you to have a referral to visit a specialist. Others will allow you to visit a specialist at a slightly higher fee so long as that doctor is in the HMO network.

Some of these plans are available only to groups while some may be open to individuals. Some will have a pre-existing condition clause.

For Pennsylvania families with children, it is wise to check the Blue Cross Chip Program for kids. For more information call 800-543-7105. For many families this is free, depending on the number of children and your incomes. If there is a cost, it is based on a sliding income scale. No one can be turned down and the coverage is excellent.

One farm family, however, actually found their income was too low to qualify for Blue Chip and were told to get a medical card. This is something a proud farm family has trouble doing and this family chose to buy a health plan instead.

A farmer with employees might want to look into a group health plan offering health insurance as an incentive. Again, contact an independent health insurance agent who is someone you know and trust. As an independent, he or she can get you a quote with a number of different companies and help you decide the best plan for you. Or contact one of the HMOs listed above.

Some of these group plans do not take pre-existing conditions into consideration.

Do beware of the independent business association policies. They are not always bad, but also, not always the best buy. Many of the companies which represent such associations will buy you in at a low price and then catch up in a year or two with a huge price increase. You may be trapped and unable to move somewhere else if you contracted a disease or had an accident in the meantime.

If you can afford nothing else, at least look for a policy which might have a large deductible. Even if the deductible is $5,000 or $10,000, this amount could be borrowed and paid back in a short amount of time. However, a catastrophe illness or injury which is not covered by any insurance could wipe out a small business owner or a farmer in a short amount of time.

Whatever type of insurance you buy, do put health insurance at the top of the list. It is one of the most important purchases you can make.

Contest Honors Grandmothers In Four States

SCHENECTADY, N.Y. — They're searching for a few good grannies.

Price Chopper supermarkets and Washington's apple growers are looking for on-the-go grandmothers to take part in their fifth annual Search for Granny Smith contest which kicks off March 4.

Each year, friends and family members are invited to nominate their favorite grandmother who personifies the wholesome attributes of Washington apples and lives life to the fullest. Entry forms will be available through April 1 at the Washington apple display in Price Chopper's 73 participating stores located in New York, Vermont, Pennsylvania and New Hampshire.

Entrants must write an essay of 100 words or less describing how the grandma they're nominating is sweet to the core and leads a healthy, active life. They're also required to submit a non-returnable photo of their nominee.

Barbara Page, Price Chopper's manager of promotions and special events, said the company supports the contest because it honors grandmothers and promotes balanced nutrition and exercise.

"These grandmothers are outstanding people, generous with both their time and energy," Page said. "And their lifestyles have given them many healthy years to share with others."

One finalist will be chosen from Price Chopper's entries. That special grandmother will receive a free trip for four to Orlando, Fla., Page said. She'll also be in the running for the title of "World's Greatest Grandma" with five other finalists selected from the United States and Canada.

The woman selected "World's Greatest Grandma" for 2001 will be honored at the Washington State Apple Blossom Festival in May. Washington Apple Commission spokesman Greg Batch said the winner will serve as the commission's official "spokesgranny" for one year, appearing on promotional posters and traveling the U.S. and Canada to promote apples and healthy living.

Last year, Price Chopper's winner was Sandee Clark of Fort Plain, N.Y. Clark stays fit by walking five days a week and enjoys cooking and traveling.

Each year, thousands of people nominate a special grandma they know. Page said she expects another great crop of grannies this year.

"Grandmothers are so important to their families and communities," she said. "This is a chance to pay tribute to these wonderful women."

Crush mothballs into a powder. Add two tablespoons cayenne pepper and two tablespoons black pepper. Spread the mix on the ground wherever you don't want the cats to go.

5 tablespoons flour
4 tablespoons powdered mustard
3 tablespoons cayenne pepper
2 tablespoons chili powder
2 quarts warm water

Mix all ingredients together. Sprinkle solution around the perimeter you want to protect.

A reader from the Southeastern area writes that chopped citrus rinds work. Pieces 1-1½ inches are not too obvious. Replace when odor is gone or try a citrus spray, just keep it off the plants. Reapply until the cats get the hint.

P. Eby, Belleville, suggests sprinkling coffee grounds in the flower bed.

ANSWER — A reader wanted to know where to find the music to anthem she sang in the church choir more than 40 years ago.: "My God and I walked through the fields together...." A reader says that this is in the Country and Western Gospel Hymnal, a Singspiration songbook, copyright 1972.

Mrs. Elizabeth Broda, Catawissa, writes that the anthem can be found in the Living Praise hymnal, compiled by John Peterson and printed by Singpiration Music of Grand Rapids, Mich.

Anna Mary Rohrer, East Berlin, sent in the words and music.

My God And I

My God and I go in the field together,
We walk and talk as good friends should and do;
We clasp our hands, our voices ring with laughter
My God and I walk through the meadow's hue
We clasp our hands, our voices ring with laughter
My God and I walk through the meadow's hue.
He tells me of the years that went before me
When heav'nly plans were made for me to be,
When all was but a dream of dim conception
To come to life, earth's verdant glory see;
When all was but a dream of dim conception,
To come to life, earth's verdant glory see.
My God and I will go for aye together
We'll walk and talk and just as good friends do;
This earth will pass, and with it common trifles
But God and i will go unendingly;
This earth will pass, and with it common trifles
But God and i will go unendingly.

Raspberry Marble Teas

Sift together:
2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
3 teaspoons double-acting baking powder
1 teaspoon salt

Set aside

Add:
½ cup sugar gradually to
⅓ cup shortening, creaming well.

Blend in the dry ingredients alternately with ¾ cup milk. Mix thoroughly after each addition. Chill at least one hour.

Pat out rounded teaspoonfuls of dough on lightly-floured surface to 2½ inch circles. Place a teaspoonful of raspberry preserves in center of each circle. Pull edges of dough up and over jam and salt. Holding sealed edges, dip underside of each into one beaten egg and then into ½ cup sugar. Place sugared-side up on the greased baking sheet. Bake at 375 for 15 to 18 minutes. Makes about two dozen.

Farm Family Appreciation Celebration

HAMBURG (Berks Co.) — Plans for a second "Farm Family Appreciation Celebration" are underway with the date scheduled for St. Patrick's Day, March 17 at the Hamburg Field House, Hamburg. Over 700 people attended last year.

"Celebration" includes a hot buffet dinner and hoedown with "Lynn Eckert and the Outlaws." The purpose is for farmers and non-farmers to celebrate together. Tickets to farm families are available at no charge. Farm family supporters can obtain tickets at $8 per adult and $5 per child (ages 3-11), with children under 3 at no charge.

The effort is being coordinated by retired ministers, Pastor Dick and Pastor Ruth Schaefer and a coalition called FARM, Farm Advocacy and Resource Ministry. They work to support pastors so that pastors may work more effectively with farm families and congregations within their own churches. They have been promoting the message of the importance of local farm families and their work. Even though they are involved with the Lutheran and UCC churches, they are ecumenical in their outreach efforts.

Sponsors of the event include: Diacon — The Lutheran Home at Topton, Mid-Atlantic Group of Lutheran Brotherhood, Northeastern PA Synod/ELCA, Penn Northeast Conference/UCC, Penn State Cooperative Extension and the Pomona Grange.

Doors open at 7 p.m. with the meal served at 7:30 p.m. and the hoedown following at 8:30 p.m.

Kids In Competition

TOWANDA (Bradford Co.) — Has your child ever come home crushed after losing a ball game?

Does he throw a temper tantrum if he doesn't win the family card game?

Is she competitive in whatever she's doing?

Does your child feel a part of the youth group?

If you answer yes to these questions and want to learn more about helping youth to cope with competition, you will want to attend the "Growing Healthy Kids: Kids in Competition" program. The program, which includes a keynote talk and three workshops, has been planned to be of special interest to youth leaders, coaches, school-age child care providers, and parents.

Sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension, "Kids in Competition" will be held on Saturday morning, March 10, at the Patterson Education Building of the Guthrie Healthcare System in Sayre. Registration time will be 9 to 9:30 a.m. with the program being held from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

There is no fee to participate, however, persons planning to attend are asked to make a reservation by March 2 by contacting the local Extension Office at (570) 265-2896 or bradfordext@psu.edu. When registering, please give your name, phone number and two workshop choices. All participants will receive a certificate of attendance. Licensed child care providers who attend can receive credit for three training hours.

The keynote talk, "Competition is More than Winning: Motivating Kids to Do Their Best," will be presented by Cyndi Regan of Watkins Glen, New York. Cyndi is a 10 time national powerlifting champion. She is the only woman in the world to have benched over 330 pounds drug free at age 42. Professionally, Cyndi has more than 20 years of experience working as a youth and career development educator. She is 4-H youth development issues team leader amp coordinator for Cornell Cooperative Extension. During her presentation, she will focus on the positive aspects of competition, the importance of developing a well-rounded life, and how to dispel the myth that if you don't win you aren't worth anything.

Workshop topics include "Cooperation, Competition and Kids," "Non-Competitive Games," and "Recognizing Illegal Drugs."

Participants in "Cooperation, Competition and Kids" will learn how competition affects youth at different ages, about the types of competition, and what the current research tells us about kids and competition. Workshop presenter will be Claudia Mincemoyer, Ph.D., assistant professor for 4-H/youth curriculum development in the Department of Agricultural and Extension Education.

This will be a hands-on workshop. Participants will play and learn a variety of games to use with youth of various ages.

"Recognizing Illegal Drugs" will give participants the opportunity to see what illegal drugs look like. Pennsylvania State Police Officer, Trooper Knight, based in Montoursville, will bring a display of illegal drugs. He will describe the signs of drug use in youth and what to do if you suspect drug use.

Antique Licenses Offer History, Geography Lessons

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

BELLEVILLE (Mifflin Co.) — "It's fascinating how much you learn - history, geography. There's so much stuff you learn when you start collecting and branching out," reflects Forrest Kauffman, of Belleville, Mifflin County.

Forrest has collected nearly 1,000 (with no duplicates) out-of-state hunting and fishing license buttons issued during the mid-20s and -30s.

They're round, metal buttons with a clear celluloid coating issued after cloth licenses (1913-1923) but before paper (during the war).

> Mifflin County Collector

"For example, I've learned that it's hard to find hunting and fishing license buttons from the Depression years. They're scarce. They only cost $1 then, but people couldn't afford them. They would have worked all day for a dollar, but couldn't afford to spend it on a license. They probably hunted anyway," he adds with a laugh.

"Here's some issued for Hawaii," Forrest says, pointing to hunting buttons labeled with a T. H. for Territory of Hawaii and the dates 1935-36. "What did they hunt?" Perhaps one of the most fascinating in Forrest's collection is a certain paper license folded and kept in a square-framed button called a window frame.

Hawaii issued hunting licenses up until 1948 or 1949. Forrest Kauffman shows that some of these were issued for the Territory of Hawaii.

Some states switched to this design when metal became scarce during the war. The paper hunting license contained the name and pertinent facts about the hunter. Forrest removes and unfolds this one, which was issued in Delaware in 1946. In pencil is written a name; Address Middletown, Delaware; Color Negro; Age 17; Weight 147.

"The southern states issued these to African Americans in the 30s and 40s," Forrest explains. "These are of interest to hunting and fishing license collectors and to those collecting black memorabilia."

Forest began collecting out-of-state licenses when it became harder to find Pennsylvania licenses. Although Forrest has collected hunting and fishing licenses from every county in Pennsylvania and for nearly every year, that same goal becomes unrealistic when collecting out-of-state licenses. He has one from every county, but not every year. Not all states issued button licenses.

> "It's fascinating how much you learn - history, geography. There's so much stuff you learn when you start collecting and branching out."
> Forrest Kauffman

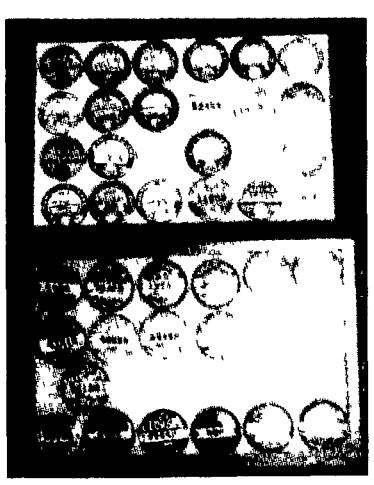
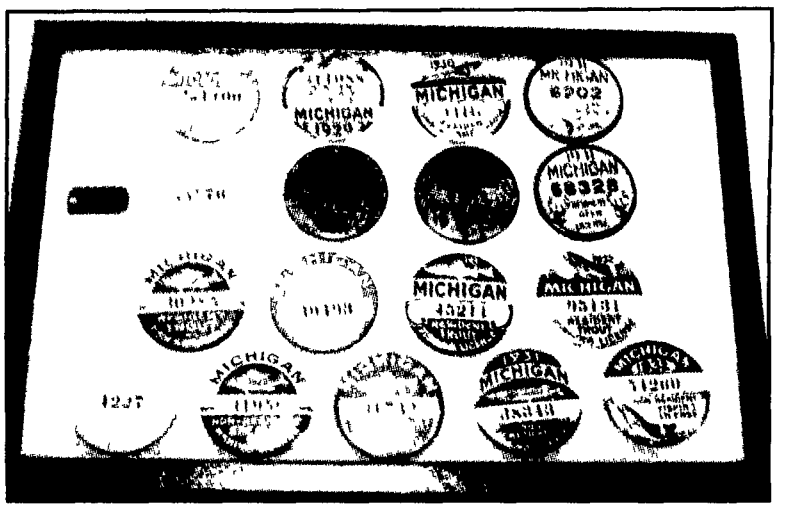
"Mississippi and South Carolina had the county names on them. Most states issued nonresident licenses, but they're pretty scarce. New Jersey issued hunting and fishing licenses for aliens, too (non-citizens)" Forrest laughs. "North Carolina issued resident, nonresident, complimentary, and combination licenses. Georgia only issued buttons for three years - 1934-36. This nonresident one from Georgia would sell for over $1,000.



The top box shows a complete set of North Carolina county and state hunting licenses from 1927 through 1939. The bottom box shows buttons representing the only three years that Georgia issued hunting and fishing licenses. The nonresident license for Georgia sells for over $1,000.



Forrest Kauffman calls this a short complete set of licenses. It includes resident small game, resident deer, and resident and nonresident fishing licenses. He knows of only one other person who has a complete set for Michigan.

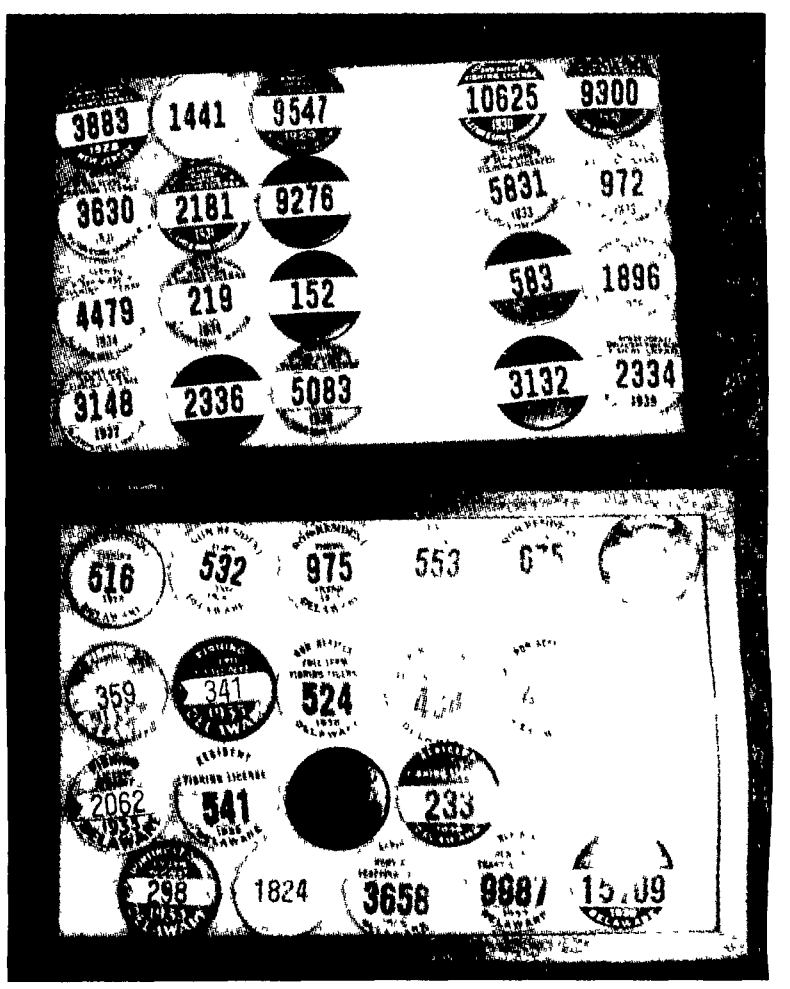
"Maryland issued only angling licenses, no hunting licenses. There were special buttons to fish in Deep Creek Lake, Md., which is near the Pennsylvania border. I like the graphics on Michigan's buttons - rabbits, ringnecks, trout, bass, and deer. The Tennessee licenses issued for Reelfoot Lake are hardest to find.

"Virginia issued an elk licenses. They sell for $1,200 now, but I don't have any. Florida issued hunting and fishing license buttons for only one year — 1927-28. I saw one on the Internet for $1,000 and it was in bad shape."

Forrest's collection has grown to include hunting and fishing licenses from other countries, such as Canada, Austria, and Germany, and game warden identification badges.

He promotes the hobby of collecting by giving stained buttons to kids at trade shows for free. He's provided information for detailed reference books written about Pennsylvania and Maryland hunting and fishing licenses.

He's also been working on another kind of collection - tidbits of information that he's gathered during his fifteen years of collecting licenses. And the most logical way to store this collection? Possibly in book form.



Kauffman keeps his New Jersey (top) collection of nonresidents hunting and fishing licenses in order by year with spaces allotted for the buttons he still needs. The bottom box displays Delaware nonresident licenses from 1928 to 1938.

"New' York Book Show Plans Grand Opening

YORK (York Co.) — Mark your calendar now to spend part of St. Patrick's Day at the "New' York Book and Paper Show on Sat., March 17 from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Plans for a super show are well underway. York Book and Paper Promotions spokesperson, Anne Muren, reports a few spaces are available for dealers. Many professional book and paper sellers from throughout the east and as far away as Michigan have already sent in contracts.

"The booths and aisles are spacious," said Anne, "with plenty of space for wheelchairs, motorized carts and strollers, but there is plenty of room for more than 50 first-class booksellers and paper dealers."

The first of the "new" shows — under new management — will be located in the Old Main building at the York Expo Center. The show will feature dealers with rare, old and collectible books, children's books, paperbacks, paper advertising, post cards, collectible paper items and more. A book appraisal booth will be part of the show in the afternoon.

In addition to dealers with rare and antiquarian books, representatives from two local non-profit organizations will be available to distribute information and sell items from their gift shows.

Carl Preate, manager for the Museum shops of the York County Historical Society, a member of the York County Heritage Trust, is pleased to have an opportunity to meet the public and provide information about the services available through the Historical Society and the York County Heritage Trust. Volunteers will sell books and other items from the Museum Shops.

Volunteers will be on hand to answer questions, recruit volunteers, and sell books donated to the Book Nook, a feature of the annual York Hospital Fete. Net proceeds from the Book Nook benefit Health Connect, a mobile medical hospital that seeks to improve the health of over 7,000 children in York who do not have health insurance.

During the afternoon, ticket holders will be entitled to one free appraisal from one of several experienced dealers who have volunteered to advise owners about their books. This is an opportunity to find out the approximate value of your family Bible, or an old children's book, an old leather-bound book, or a favorite volume you've owned since college.

For more information, contact York Book and Paper Promotions at (717) 428-3776 or racbooks@cyberia.com.

Orientalism Decor Once Victorian Fashion

It may look like something out of the Arabian Nights, but be Victorian.

Whoever said Victorian furnishings were a series of revival styles apparently had forgotten the exotic trend that began in America around 1870. Its influence lasted into 1930. Known as "Moorish," "Turkish," "Saracenic" or "Arab," it can be recognized by furniture ebonized, inlaid with mother-of-pearl. Chairs and sofas were often covered with carpet, upholstered with rich embroidered covers and always topped with thick cushions.

Even John D. Rockefeller had a "moorish" sitting room in his New York house in the 1880s. Good examples of Orientalism are to be found in the pieces made by Tiffany & Company in the 1880s. For instance, in 1882 the Company decorated a room in the Moorish style for the fifth avenue mansion of Cornelius Vanderbilt II. It included Moorish arch forms and highly patterned walls with the look of Persian tiles.

The World's Columbian Exposition held in Chicago in 1893 introduced the general public to Orientalism. As a result, Sears Roebuck sold Turkish screens, Moorish rugs and pointed yellow slippers to decorate the popular smoking rooms of the average American.

An early influence was English architect and designer M. Owen Jones. He designed many buildings and decorative ideas in the 1840s. However, actual furniture in the Moorish style didn't become popular till the 1870s.

Orientalism found its way into the art world by the early 20th century as a symbol of quality, pleasure and even romance. A good example is the ad made for General Electric's Edison Lamp Works in a palette of luminescent colors, created by famed illustrator, muralist Maxfield Parrish. Lamps and jewelry were designed reflecting the orientalist mode.

The Mint Museum of Art in Charlotte, N.C. has put it all together in the exhibition "Noble Dreams, Wicked Pleasures; Orientalism in America," 1870-1930, Feb. 3 through April 22. The exhibition includes approximately 100 paintings, decorative arts, sheet music, advertisements, photographs, fashion, film clips and Shriner memorabilia.

The Shriners, founded in 1870, by the 1920s had become a popular national mens club whose members dressed in fezzes and carried scimitars. These days they are known for their charitable works.

Orientalism Cont'd

nary Orient intimately connected to their own needs," explained exhibition curator Holly Edwards. "Some people needed escape from the modern world. Some needed religious inspiration. Others simply needed to have a good time."

That "good time" was reflected by movies such as The Sheik, that made Rudolph Valentino a superstar of the day and cigarettes given Oriental brand names like Fatima, Omar and Camels. Even music reflected the trend with songs like Irving Berlin's "In My Harem" and "My Turkish Opal from Constantinople."

Orientalism in art was displayed in American paintings who imitated Continental Oriental styles. French colonial views of Muslim Asia and North Africa were a mix of racial prejudice and an attitude of cultural superiority. Two exhibition examples are found in Jean-Leon G'erome's The Slave Market and The Snake Charmer.

Clues: Since everything from silver, glass, art, furniture and decorative objects was made in the Orientalism mode, it can be confusing for a beginning collector. Look for makers marks. It may look Turkish but be made in America. Floral motifs can often look like the swirling designs of Art Nouveau. Arches and arabesques are clues. Color enamels and mixed metals on silver as well as peacock feather motifs can point to an Orientalism style piece. Furniture may be topped with minarets or mother-of-pearl inlays.

Grain/commodities harvested from Roundup Ready® corn and Roundup Ready corn with YieldGard® is approved for U.S food and feed use, but not yet approved in certain export markets where approval is not likely to be received before the end of 2001. As a result, the Grower is restricted from introducing such grain/commodities into channels of trade where the potential for export to such markets exists The Grower must channel such grain/commodities for feeding on farm, use in domestic feed lots or other uses in domestic markets only. Growers should refer to Monsanto's Technology Use Guide for information on crop stewardship regarding the potential movement of pollen to neighboring crops. For assistance in locating domestic outlets for all other corn grain/commodities, view the ASTA web site at www.amseed.org or contact Monsanto at 1-800-768-6387. Always read and follow label directions. Attention:

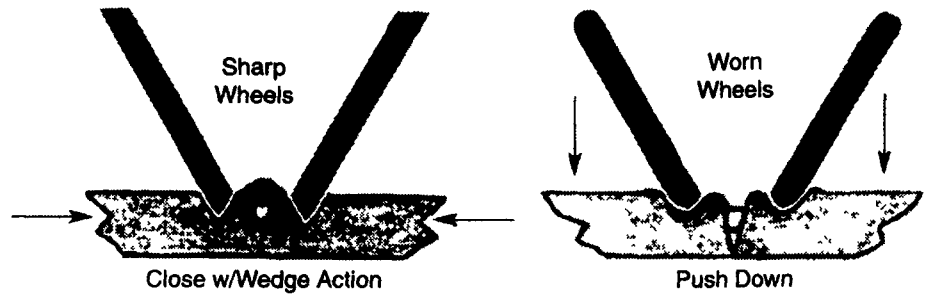
Kinze/John Deere Planter & No-Till Drill Owners

Did you know that those old cast iron closing wheels can be reconditioned to "like-new" performance for a fraction of replacement cost?

Now is the time to get ready for tough planting conditions like sod and dry, hard soil. We can help your older planter or drill to close those seed trenches properly. (See illustration)



After all, if a field is worth planting, why not do it right?

Benefits include:
- ✔ Less closing pressure
- ✔ More uniform germination
- ✔ Improved stand population
- ✔ Increased yields

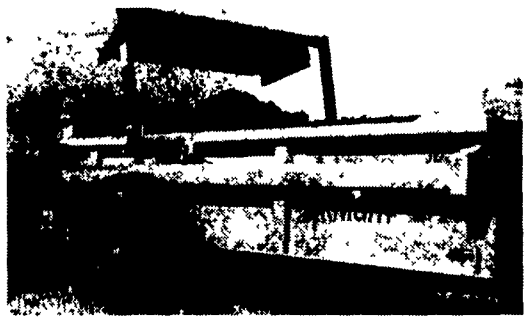
New Heavy Duty 300 Bushel Knight Box Spreaders IN STOCK at BINKLEY & HURST BROS. INC.

BUILT NEW FROM THE GROUND UP WITH NEARLY 50 YEARS OF TESTING!

An all-new spreader designed and built in the Knight tradition of heavy-duty, rugged, long-lasting products with features to carry you into the 21st century.

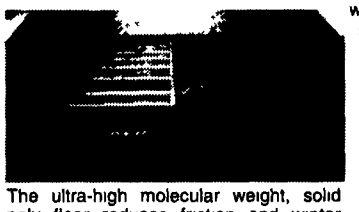
Single Axle and Tandem Axle Models



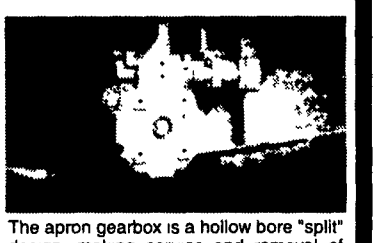
Heavy Duty Variable Speed Drive System

A variable speed, hydraulic apron drive with tractor-mounted speed control valve allows easy adjustment of the apron speed for different materials and for load clean-out

This cut-away view shows the lower side and frame overlap ① which is specially engineered to provide added strength and double protection against rust through The inverted U-channel cross members ② provide double the floor support area for superior strength The inverted design reduces corrosion by eliminating trapped material



The ultra-high molecular weight, solid poly floor reduces friction and winter freeze down and provides more strength and durability than individual tongue and groove boards or plywood coated with plastic This 3/4" thick, two-piece UHMW poly floor is a first of its kind and is designed to allow for expansion and contraction



The apron gearbox is a hollow bore "split" design, making service and removal of the apron shaft an easy task An overload relief valve is mounted directly to the hydraulic drive motor to help protect the apron drive 10 year warranty on side rust through and on poly floors.

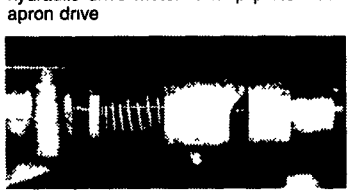
Low Profile For Easy Loading

The paddle placement on the specially designed, 26" diameter rooster-comb beater provides a more consistent, wide spread pattern with better break-up of material The 5/16" thick, one-piece paddles are pre-punched for bolt-on replacement teeth



The greaseable, 2-jaw, over running clutch allows for easy PTO hook up and prevents beater backlash force when the PTO is disengaged The transfer shaft is piloted into the rear clutch jaw to maintain continuous alignment

Our Parts Support Commitment

Bigger Inventory

Hoober's parts network begins with Hoober's $4 million parts inventory. Hoober trucks make daily trips to the Case-IH parts depot. That means Hoober's parts inventory is restocked each and every day. Hoober's massive inventory means we usually have the part you need in stock.

Faster Delivery

When it comes to parts, Hoober knows timing is critical. That is why Hoober has the resources to get you the part you need quickly. We send parts twice daily by UPS and daily by Federal Express. And Hoober's computerized locating system enables us to find parts not in stock and get them to our customers quickly. All of this helps us meet our goal of same-day parts service.

Better Service

Hoober has the experienced parts personnel dedicated to helping meet your parts needs. Our parts service effort never stops, with after hours parts service 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Whether in person or over the phone, when you talk to Hoober's sales staff, you can be sure you're talking to someone who knows parts. Top Producers Choose Knight!

Congratulations to the La-Foster Farm

Terry and Gerald Foster are very proud of their record-breaking cow, Lucy, and rightly so. She produced 75,260 pounds of milk in her last lactation. They are also pleased with their Knight Reel Auggie® mixers, which, combined with the Foster's excellent management practices, have propelled the La-Foster herd average to the #1 milk production status in North Carolina. There is no comparison to the complete, palatable blend from a Knight Reel Auggie, with its patented reel and auger blending combination. Why else would the La-Foster Farm choose only Knight to feed their record-setting herd?

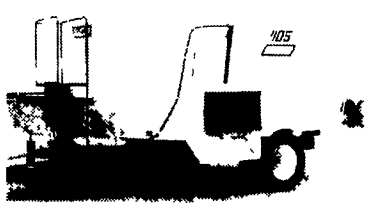
Roto-Mix Introduces Vertical Feed Mixer

DODGE CITY, Kan. — Roto-Mix has introduced the "new" model 1105A Vertical Feed Mixer with dual mixing screw design.

This "twin-mix" vertical feed mixer has been designed for the customer who wants large feed mixing capacity while easily handling different ration ingredients. By adding optional extensions, the mixing capacity can easily increase to 1,205 or even 1,305 cubic feet.

The Roto-Mix 1105A "twin-mix" vertical feed mixer has the exclusive "auto-mix" driveline. This drive provides an advantage of reduced horsepower requirements, easy full-load startups, smoother bale processing, more even discharge, and eliminates PTO overload failures.

The heavy-duty automatic truck transmission is the heart of the auto-mix drive system, allowing this high capacity mixer to be powered by a medium duty tractor. Speed and torque are automatically adjusted by the drive to balance the need for power required to process round bales or other types of hay to the desired length, yet provide high speed of the rotor for complete cleanout.



This "twin-mix" vertical feed mixer has been designed for the customer who wants large feed mixing capacity while easily handling different ration ingredients.

The flared sides of this twin screw design offers a smaller diameter at the mixing chamber base for a sizable reduction in torque. Flaring the sides to a larger diameter at the top increases the capacity yet provides a low loading height for easy filling. More cutting knives and extra flighting process hay faster to shorten your mixing time, but will still efficiently mix a wide variety of feeding ingredients.

Sussex Irrigation Named Best

LINDSAY, Neb. — Lindsay Manufacturing Company recently recognized Sussex Irrigation Company, Inc. of Laurel, Del., as the number one Zimmatic dealership in North America at the company's annual convention in San Antonio, Texas.

For their outstanding record for service and sales, Sussex Irrigation Company, Inc. received Zimmatic's Top Dealer Award. There are more than 200 Zimmatic dealerships in North America.

"This award represents years of dedicated work and consistent performance improvements in a highly competitive business," Zimmatic Vice President of Sales Bob Snoozy said. "Sussex Irrigation Company, Inc. should be very proud of being named the best of the best."

Zimmatic dealers are a critical link in the chain between customers and Lindsay Manufacturing. Lindsay provides several product education and training seminars to the dealers who in turn pass the information on to their customers. Many dealers also provide customers with a hands-on training opportunity by hosting the Zimmatic Technical Training Center as part of a one-day irrigation equipment seminar.

Auctioneer Wins Best Of Show

SOUTHWICK, Mass. — The New York State Auctioneers Association conducted its annual convention in Syracuse this November. The association has announced that Auctioneer Phil Jacquier, Inc. won best of show in their advertising contest.

Auctioneers from New York, Pennsylvania, and surrounding states submitted material from either an advertisement from the past year's sales or promotional information on their company.

One of the criteria for the contest is that the advertisement or brochure had to display the NYSAA emblem. NYSAA believes the emblem is a sign of professionalism and shows that the auctioneer is dedicated to improving their ability and professional knowledge through education, integrity, and honesty.

Auctioneer Phil Jacquier won the best of show with a four-page colored brochure that promotes his auction company. His brochure not only displays the NYSAA emblem, but also that of the National Auctioneers Association and the Massachusetts State Auctioneers Association.

Jacquier has also incorporated the three emblems into his logo as hat pins on his cowboy hat. The brochure has a montage photo on the front cover, a step-by-step explanation of the auction process in the center section, and photos of he and his family "in auction" on the back page.

Phil's Webpage, jacquierauctions.com, was designed to compliment his business brochure and is also used to promote his company and advertise up and coming auctions.

Extensive Agronomic, Nutritional Screenings Bring Better Hybrids

MOUNT JOY (Lancaster Co.) — As part of its extensive agronomic research and nutritional screenings, Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc. has introduced several new corn silage hybrids for the eastern U.S.

Three new hybrids, in particular, exemplify the quality and strength of the hybrids available for the 2001 growing season.

"When crop and livestock producers select seed for corn silage, a general rule of thumb is to remember that the best hybrids for grain production are generally the best hybrids for corn silage," said Carl Bannon, technology information manager for Pioneer in Mount Joy. "However, at Pioneer, only hybrids that provide both agronomic and nutritional benefits are advanced and recommended for silage production."

Several hybrids in the new lineup include:

• Pioneer brand hybrid 31G98 provides exceptional silage yield potential with excellent readily available energy (RAE). With a 117-day comparative relative maturity (CRM), it is an excellent choice in the east, where a fuller season product is desired.

• Hybrid 31R88 is energy-rich with exceptional silage yield and readily available energy. It also has very good whole-plant digestibility, good fiber digestibility, and a 118 CRM.

• Superior silage yield potential, combined with outstanding whole-plant digestibility and RAE best describes new 38T27. It is a 95 CRM hybrid.

To ensure the performance of a hybrid in a specific area, Pioneer tests hybrids for three years before they are available to growers. In addition, Pioneer completes a minimum of 20 side-by-side comparisons over a two- to three-year period to ensure yield or nutritional differences in hybrids are due to genetics, not environmental causes, maturity differences, or sampling or laboratory errors.

"When Pioneer tells a grower a hybrid is a good choice for corn silage in his or her area, we have data to back it up," said Bannon.

In addition, Bannon notes Pioneer is unique because the company has a team of nutritionists, veterinarians, and corn breeders working together to rate hybrids for important traits such as grain and silage yields, whole-plant digestibility, starch content, fiber digestibility, milk or meat production per acre, and overall tonnage.

Other steps Pioneer takes to ensure superior performance and an exceptional agronomic and nutritional package include worldwide forage research that can benefit North American operations. Additionally, the Pioneer Livestock Nutrition Center (PLNC) in Iowa annually tests 15 tons of corn silage samples.

First Bed Divider

HIGHLAND PARK, Ill. — Loading Zone introduces the Original Cargo Gate, a revolutionary new pickup truck bed divider.

The device provides a reliable and convenient restraint for tools, equipment, supplies, or anything else hauled in the back of pickup trucks.

More versatile than conventional cargo bars, the Loading Zone Cargo Gate forms a barrier from the bottom cargo area to the top of the rails with no assembly or mounting hardware required.

The Loading Zone Cargo Gate fully conforms to the height and width of the truck bed, unlike cargo bars, which do not accommodate variable height/weight items or conform to wheel wells. A unique lock-and-load design makes the restraint easy to install, giving the truck owner more versatility in placing the gate and dividing the truck bed.

The Cargo Gate is available in four sizes (full-size, tundra, mid-size and compact).

PASA Conference 'Beyond Business As Usual'

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The chaf has hardly settled from the Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture's 10th annual Farming for the Future Conference. Yet plans are under way for number 11, plans that will build on the inspiration and ideas generated by more than 1,000 attendees and the stellar speakers at this year's event.

There was something for everyone at "Food Is Our Commonwealth: Beyond Business As Usual."

Jo Robinson, author of "The Omega Diet," and "Why Grassfed is Best," talked about the marketing opportunities for those raising grass-based animals and how, for the average consumer, there must be an "intersection of healthy food and convenience." That may require innovative thinking for the grower/marketer, such as including recipes for unusual cuts, selling by individual cuts, and in general catering more to "convenience shoppers."

"Own your customers," she said. "Take care of their needs. Provide education. Invite your customers into your life."

Kathy Lawrence, executive director for the National Campaign for Sustainable Agriculture, and Joan Gussow, author, joined forces for sessions on the importance and difficulty of eating locally and seasonally, and how critical it is to "help people want to make personal eating changes."

In addition to speakers giving farmers ideas and tactics by which they can engage and market directly to consumers; there were lots of speakers speaking to farmers about how to improve the health and fertility of their farm production.

Soil health expert Gary Zimmer, well known to PASA members and past conference goers, talked in two sessions about building and maintaining soil health using cover crops and custom-designed soil correction methods.

Other speakers who provided a wealth of practical, hands-on information included:

- Beekeepers Robert Hawkes and Diana Sammataro.
- Pennsylvania graziers Jim Weaver and Kim Seeley.
- Organic orchardist Dennis Mackey.
- Successful, sustainable, "mountain-side" farmers Jim and Adele Hayes from Sap Bush Hollow Farm in New York.
- Diversified vegetable-grower and direct-marketer Jim Crawford, who, with his wife Moie, farm 25 acres in Huntingdon County.

Providing inspirational opening and closing comments were keynoters Jim Hightower and Winona LaDuke.

Hightower, author and activist, got the conference off to a rousing start with a talk that touched on topics from the new president to taking power back at the local level — issues ultimately relevant to all things agricultural.

"Fewer people voted on Nov. 7 than bowled last year," said the former Texas commissioner of agriculture. "The question is the most basic of democracy: Who's going to be in charge?"

Who indeed? Closing keynoter Winona LaDuke, author, Native American rights advocate, and friend of sustainable agriculture, told the crowd that those who cannot control what happens on their land cannot control their destiny.

"The electoral process is not necessarily the centerpiece of change," she said. "Natural law is the highest law."

Conference goers also had the opportunity to meet Brian Snyder, PASA's new executive director. And for the first time, PASA committee leaders hosted a "future issues forum," an effort to determine where the organization should focus its efforts during the year. Some suggestions were consumer education, outreach to other states, and taking on a more politically active role.

An annual highlight of the conference is the presentation of the Sustainable Agriculture Leadership Award. This year's winner was Steve Groff. Groff is the owner/operator of Cedar Meadow Farm in Lancaster County. He is a leader in the field, a proponent of no-till agriculture and of soil health and soil fertility. Groff has served on PASA's board for five years. He hosts an annual educational field day at his farm, which draws a crowd of hundreds from his local community, the state, and the region. He has demonstrated a real commitment to sustainable agriculture and PASA's mission.

Conference workshop audio tapes are available from the PASA office. For information about ordering or about PASA and how the organization and its members are working to promote profitable farms which produce healthy food for all people, while respecting the natural environment, call (814) 349-9856, check out the Website at www.pasafarming.org, or write to P.O. Box 419, 114 W. Main Street, Millheim, PA, 16854.

The new Hesston® 4755 creates a half-ton bale that's perfect for either transporting or feeding to your own stock

Wet or dry?

The 4755 easily handles both In fact, you can bale high-moisture crops and seal in high feed values without any equipment modifications

New Interactive CD-ROM Provides Comprehensive Information

PLOVER, Wis. — The Crop Storage Institute (CSI) has developed a new information resource for the livestock industry. The CD-ROM, titled "Crop Storage Systems," contains comprehensive information regarding forage storage for livestock production.

While all the information on the CD-ROM is available from other sources, it is often scattered and hard to understand. This project, which spent nearly two years in production, compiles all of the available information into one easy to use resource.

The software package can be extremely helpful to anyone in the livestock industry from extension agents and agricultural educators to producers. Its primary use is in comparing the tower, horizontal, and bag methods of storage. It contains slide show programs, spreadsheets, and encyclopedia style information.

This CD is one of the first resources to use interactive software to package information on forage storage.

Crop Storage Systems is made available free of charge due to contributions from the crop storage industry. For a copy of the disk or more information contact the Crop Storage Institute at P.O. Box 278; Plover, WI 54467; (630) 254-5133. The web address is www.cropstorage.com or cropstorage@cs.com.

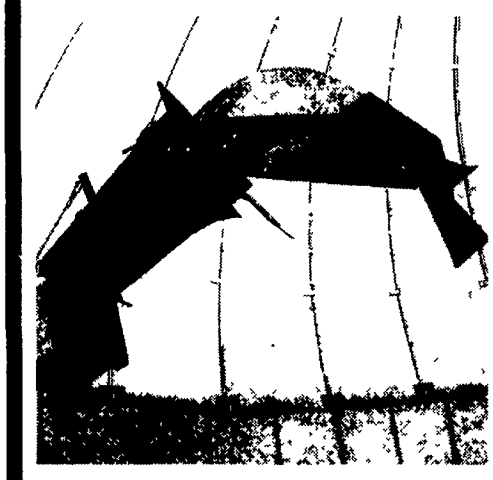
Silage Spreaders with a Heritage of Quality

Lancaster Level-Flo has been the leader in non-motorized silage spreaders for more than 25 years. Each spreader is specifically designed to meet the needs of the individual operator.



Choose the spreader that best matches the equipment you use to fill your silo.

The Model 1030 Multi-Flo® is our standard silage spreader. With a 9" gooseneck, it is designed for average capacity blowers and silo sizes.

The Model 1200 Multi-Flo® has a 12" wide gooseneck. Its larger size all but eliminates plugging problems, even when you blow in haylage. It is especially helpful in larger silos.

The BlueMax® is built for those who push high-capacity silo filling equipment to the limit. All parts of the BlueMax® subject to wear are made 25% heavier - and the stainless steel plate is twice as heavy. For strength, there are reinforcements all around. Even our well-known non-binding hinge is heavier.

For more information or the location of the Lancaster dealer nearest you, call today 1-800-635-8708.

"I am very pleased with the Roto-Mix. It does a good job of processing dry, baled hay."
- Frank Graybill, Hershey, PA

When he decided to replace his old Artsway mixer, Mr. Graybill looked at several other brands besides Roto-Mix. The model 414 he bought from Lapp's Barn Equipment met his needs best.

Frank Graybill has a herd of 140 cows, milking 120. Herd average is 26,000 lbs., milking 3 times per day. Normal ration includes corn silage, haylage, high moisture corn, etc. Dry hay per feeding is 320 lbs. (5% of mix).

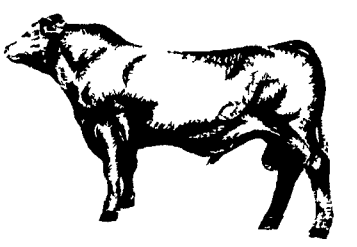
BEEF TIPS

A New Record at Pa Bull Test



A Black Simmental bull has obliterated the growth record for bulls on test at Penn State University. HWF Kris, owned by Haven Woods Farms of Stoneboro, Pa. gained an unheard of 6.32 pounds per day, each and every day of the 112 day test. The old record, set in 1991 by a Simmental bull from Laural Valley Farms in Ligonier, was 5.51 pounds of growth per day.

Senior Division Distinguished Junior Members

Five outstanding individuals were finalists in the senior division of the Distinguished Junior Member Contest. The five finalists each completed a scrapbook listing their accomplishments in Holstein activities, schoolwork, community involvement, leadership and their ideas of the future in agriculture and the Holstein industry.

IT TAKES TWO EYES TO MANAGE A BUSINESS

Roland P. Freund
Extension Farm Management Agent

Forty years ago farmers were able to keep about 40 cents out of each dollar of farm income for family living and capital purchases. At that time, most of them could make a living and maintain the farm without worrying about fine-tuning anything in their business.

Today, on many of our farms, that margin has dropped to about 20 cents on the dollar. This means that it does not take many mistakes and the family is fresh out of bread money.

This situation is not unique to agriculture. We are in a more competitive world where all business managers must plan very carefully to even survive.

One-Eye Approaches

A "right-eye approach" to this problem is to pay lots of attention to the expense side of the business. The "economizers" among us will scrimp and scrape on costs in the belief that "a penny saved is a penny made." Unfortunately, this often results in starving "the goose that lays the golden egg." Even a blind person could quickly identify a symptom of this syndrome when she runs her hands over the protruding bones of the cows.

The "left-eye approach" is to concentrate all the attention on producing one's way out of trouble. In the past, this strategy has been very successful for some. Unfortunately, it often results in pouring more inputs — particularly grain concentrates and the latest and greatest additives into cows — to the point where returns are actually diminished. In a dairy, this can manifests itself through acidosis, lameness, and ironically, the skinny herd problem again.

What Should We Look At?

There is no single solution to every farm's problem. There is no silver bullet that will slay the dragons that are dragging our businesses down. But there are many tools that we have at our disposal right now which can help us identify and correct problems.

We have financial records, our production records, and our special records such as field, herd, DHIA and somatic cell. If we combine the evidence that we can gather from these sources, and look at them with two eyes, we can gain more depth perspective. This will help us identify root causes to problems and focus our management attention. But we need a systematic approach to guide the process.

Analyzing our past performance is the first step in a survival strategy. In this process we can identify our business's strengths, weaknesses, opportunities, and threats (SWOT analysis). To do this, we will need our financial (tax accounting) records, beginning and ending inventories for the year, and the above-mentioned production records.

Which Measurements Should Be Examined?

Good accounting and business management services offer profit and loss statements which are adjusted for balance sheet changes. These are also called accrual-adjusted income statements. They enable us to focus on what was produced (rather than only what was sold) and the total impact of that process on the business. In addition, they should present some important financial information for the year, such as change in net worth, debt-to-asset ratio, current ratio, return on assets, percent of income to pay operating expenses, and term-debt coverage ratio.

Ideally financial measures should also be related to the production unit applicable to the major enterprises. These might be expressed as profit margin per acre, per bushel, per cow, per CWT., etc. This requires some careful record-keeping and quite sophisticated analysis processes.

Tools Available

Finpack from the Center for Farm Financial Management, University of Minnesota, is more user-friendly and affordable to farmers. For $595, it can be installed on any Windows 95 or later computer. A free demonstration version is available from your farm management agent.

Finpack is the most comprehensive farm financial planning and analysis system available. It enables the farmer to quickly and easily develop balance sheets and year-end analyses. In addition, if we wish to focus both eyes forward, its very powerful planning modules efficiently prepare strategic (long-range) and cash flow plans. This great cash-flow planner alone is worth the price of the entire package.

Training Offered

A two-day training session for Farmer Finpack will be offered at Cumberland County Extension Office on Tuesday, March 20 and Thursday, March 22. Hands-on computer training will commence each day at 9:30 a.m. and end by 3 p.m. A fee of $40 will be charged for each computer utilized. Basic Windows and keyboard skills are a prerequisite. Attendance will be limited to the first 10 registrants who send in the $40 fee.

For more information and to register, contact, Cumberland County Extension Office, 1100 Claremont Road, Carlisle, PA 17013, (717) 240-6500 or e-mail rfreund@psu.edu.

PURINA'S SUPER EXT® BOOSTS PRODUCTIVITY AT CORRELL FARM

Jim, Becky and James Correll, of Clayton Delaware are committed to making the right things happen on their dairy. With well over 200 registered Holsteins (120 cows and 110 heifers) and 460 acres (160 owned and 300 rented) they realize the importance of working on the right things and having the right people on their team.

Cows are milked twice per day, with mostly family labor, plus some help from JoAnn Lane. Milk is sold to Land O'Lakes Co-op.

The Correll's look to Gene Garrett, Purina's local dairy specialist, and the Purina team for dairy nutrition leadership. Their forage (corn silage and alfalfa baleage) is complemented by Purina's Super EXT® 24% feed, fed through six Boumatic computerized feeders. Jim has been especially pleased with butterfat production, since feeding Super EXT®.

Cow comfort is very important on the Correll dairy. James Jr. and cousin Aaron Thompson recently worked to improve cow comfort by renovating the freestall barn.

Teamwork, enhanced nutrition and better cow comfort are paying off. The Correll dairy has achieved their highest production yet; a herd average of 21,643 pounds milk, 828 pounds fat and 678 pounds of protein.

Purina Mills Inc. compliments the Correll's on their progress and thanks them for the opportunity to be part of their team.

Tomato Processor Honors Growers At Luncheon

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — A man who has saved the tomato processing industry "countless thousands of dollars," noted James Kohl, vice president of Furman Foods, was honored with a service award in early February.

Cyril Smith, professor emeritus of plant nutrition, was honored for 42 years of service by Kohl of Furman Foods.

The award was presented in front of about 50 growers and agri-industry representatives at the annual Pennsylvania and Maryland Tomato Awards Luncheon during the Mid-Atlantic Fruit and Vegetable Convention at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center.

Smith's band fertilizer placement was crucial in cost savings and improvement in nutrient use by the plant, now adopted widely by the industry.

Smith's contributions "saved us a substantial amount of money in our cultural practices," Kohl noted.

The Master Grower Award for 2001 was presented to BJ Farms, Bridgetown, N.J., represented by Gregg and Frank Baitinger.

Kohl spoke about the recent acquisition by Furman of Tri-Valley Growers in California.

Furman Foods now owns all brand Tri-Valley labels, Kohl said. Tri-Valley processed about 800,000- 850,000 tons of tomatoes per year, compared to Furmans' 65,000 tons, but Furmans has plans in place to ensure continue production at similar scales.

"You have to move forward, or be left behind," said Kohl. "We expect to get better at (processing), and be bigger at it." This will enhance their total East Coast processing.

Three Generations Part Of A Growing Business In Landisville

MICHELLE RANCK

LANDISVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Urban sprawl, though a challenge to farmers, can also be an opportunity, as David and Lois Landis have discovered.

Warm summertime temperatures seem to stir local residents' tastes for fresh produce from the farm, as customers forego their daily stop at the grocery store to purchase food grown on the acreage behind the roadside stand at Landisview Produce.

Consequently, the combination of availability of customers and their eagerness to purchase the product has led to a full-time job for the Landis family.

Landis' father, John S. Landis, 85, and mother, Anna, also still help at the stand.

Sweet corn, potatoes, tomatoes, peppers, green beans, egg plants, and zucchini are just a few of the varieties of produce sold at the Landisview Produce stand. David Landis estimates that 90 percent of what is sold at the stand comes from the farm's fields.

Tomatoes, along with Silver King and Argent sweet corn, are the hottest sellers for Landis. "That's what

Geraniums, Impatiens Fill Plots At 'Flowering' Research Center

LANDISVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — About 800 different flower varieties were on display in trials here last year at the Penn State Southeast Agricultural Research and Extension Center.

In this photo from mid-July, the two largest trials involved geraniums and impatiens at the entrance to the facility, according to John Yocum, research and extension center manager.

Yocum said the variety studies, on about an acre at the center, have been under way close to 10 years, when "we stopped growing tobacco at the station," he said. Alan Michael, Penn State horticulture, is coordinating the trials.

Last week the center was busy transplanting new varieties in the greenhouse. Work last year looked at full sun and partial shade impatiens varieties and a wide variety of other flowers.

Statewide Program Selects Best Pa. Plant Of Year

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Penn State Master Gardeners have chosen two plants, "Tidal Wave Cherry" petunia and "Angel Mist Purple Stripe" Angelonia, as the Pennsylvania Gardener Selects Plants of the Year for 2001.

The flowering annuals received the honor by posting consistently high marks in tests at Penn State's Horticulture Trial Gardens and in the university's Gardener Selects program, a series of growing trials at 38 Penn State-sponsored gardens in 32 counties across Pennsylvania. Fifteen other plants were named Gardener Selects varieties.

"Both plants were truly outstanding," said Robert Berghage, associate professor of horticulture. "All of these plants grew and flowered well in the evaluations gardens. Ask for them by name at a Pennsylvania garden center, greenhouse or nursery."

• "Tidal Wave Cherry" petunia: The co-winning plant is a spreading petunia with a vigorous upright growth habit. It forms a dense, mounding hedge of bright flowers that can grow 2 to 3 feet high. "This is a fantastic foundation plant for full sun," Berghage said. "It's a landscaper's dream come true."

• "Angel Mist Purple Stripe" Angelonia: This co-winner has purple and white flowers on tall, upright spikes. The plants tolerate heat, and dry and wet conditions. If cut, the flowers can last two to three weeks in a vase. "Angelonia should be grown in full sun," Berghage said.

• "Misty Lilac Wave" petunia: An outstanding spreading-type petunia with light lilac flowers. "The 'Wave' series cultivars are outstanding in garden beds and containers," Berghage said. "They recover from rain more rapidly than most other petunia varieties."

• Pink Wave petunia: This pink petunia has all the qualities of the other Wave cultivars.

• "Purple Wave" petunia: The first Wave cultivar, this petunia grows to lower heights than the other winning petunias.

• "Kahuna Violet" Petunia: This upright, spreading petunia grows in a dense hedge and is well suited for large plantings.

• "Butterfly" Marguerite Daisy (Argyranthemum): This bright yellow daisy flowers all summer and has few insect problems. "They improve when deadheaded, but the appearance is acceptable even when spent flowers are not removed," Berghage said.

• "Indian Summer" Rudbeckia hirta: This cultivar has huge bright yellow flowers. "It flowers from seed in one season," Berghage explained. "It will be one of the most spectacular plants in the garden in August." Although some Rudbeckia are perennials, this cultivar should be treated as an annual.

• "Bonanza Bolero" marigold: A bi-color French marigold, this cultivar is uniform, compact and vigorous. It makes an excellent bedding border.

• "Super Chili" ornamental pepper: The colorful red, orange and yellow fruit give gardens superb color in August and September.

• "Signum" salvia: This vigorous variety blooms profusely and attains its best appearance in July and August. It has blue flowers and can reach 16 to 18 inches in height.

• "Aztec Dark Lavender" Verbena: This is a superior verbena cultivar that blooms well all summer.

• "Tapien Blue Violet" Verbena: This verbena is a superior ground cover with very dense growth. It has brilliant purple flowers.

• "Profusion Orange" zinnia: This robust zinnia produces lots of bright orange single flowers and is resistant to mildew. "The flowers do not fade and do not need to be removed," Berghage said.

Three perennials also were added to the Gardener Selects list.

• "Magnus" echinacea purporea: This purple conflower has ornamental and medicinal value. It has improved flower color, size and orientation. "The plant should be grown in full sun in well-drained soils," Berghage said.

• "Russian sage" Perovskia atriplicifoli: This perennial is very hardy and vigorous. It has silver foliage and blue flowers. It can reach 4 feet in height with an equal spread. "It will tolerate dry conditions and poor soils," Berghage said.

• "Goldsturm" Rudbeckia fulgida: This plant produces numerous large golden-yellow, daisy-like flowers in the fall. This variety prefers full sun but can tolerate partial shade and heavy soils, if the soil is well drained.

Three Generations

people want," said David, who is kept busy keeping up with the demand created by the customers stopping off from the heavily-trafficked road.

The Landis family begins the sale season in the spring with potted flowers and hanging plants from local greenhouses, a marketing effort spearheaded by Lois Landis. Soon sugar peas and asparagus join the rows of flowers at the stand.

In addition, Landis estimates that workers picked 2,000 boxes of strawberries from local pick-your-own fields to sell this year.

According to David Landis, the busiest time of day is during rush-hour traffic in the early evening as customers make a quick stop to add produce to their dinner table. Landis' father, John S. Landis, 85, helps a customer at the stand.

Fall displays not only enhance the overall appearance of the stand, the gourds and pumpkins are popular with customers.

Good news travels fast . . . most of the stand's advertising is word-of-mouth, but a sign in front of the sign lets customers know what produce is in season.

Customers find three generations of the Landis family — including Darvin, David, and John S. — working at the busy "Landisview Produce" stand. Sweet corn, potatoes, tomatoes, peppers, green beans, egg plants, and zucchini are just a few of the varieties of produce sold at the Landisview Produce stand. About 90 percent of what is sold at the stand comes from the farm's fields.

Most of the potato crop, interestingly, becomes french fries for a local fry-maker.

Six part-time employees work at the stand, plus the full-time work of Landis and his wife. "Over the years I have employed mostly young people from the youth group," he said.

After working in the dairy business for 30 years as a sideline, Landis and his family moved off the farm in 1995, and the family moved full-time into the produce business.

Landis' sons got started growing cantaloupes on the home farm, which the young entrepreneurs sold on a rented farm with a wagon 15 years ago. These early efforts are a forerunner to today's stand, which displays an ever-changing variety of produce and plants.

Landis hopes to expand inventory to include a larger variety and higher quantity of items.

Starting the plants under plastic helps to extend the season by bringing produce the first week in July. The Landis family also uses a greenhouse for 800 tomato plants. These greenhouses then yield some of first tomatoes of the season.

"We also try to use water bags to try to get them earlier," said Landis, who described the plastic "water walls" which shield the plants from the elements, but let in sunshine and warmth.

The Landis family's emphasis on quality combined with reasonable prices is a sure customer-pleaser.

The stand is ideally situated in a high-density area. "There's a lot of development around here," said Landis, who estimates that customers come from a broad area in Lancaster. It is also difficult to pinpoint a typical customer at the stand, as all ages of area residents or tourists come to purchase the products sold.

Although the stand receives a steady flow of customers during the day, according to Landis, most business is conducted during rush-hour traffic between five and six in the evening. "We have a lot of people that stop every day," he said.

The secret to building a profitable business is staightforward, according to Landis. "Quality, quality, quality. Location, location, location — that's a lot of it," he said. "Also freshness of product. If you don't have that, they (customers) can get it at a one-stop Wal-Mart.

"We have fresh-picked corn every day, not coming out of a cooler. We try to have it so we run out of corn every day. If they're buying cold corn, they might as well buy it at a chain store," said Landis.

To harvest the day's supply, Landis begins picking at 6 a.m.

Advertising has traditionally been low-key for the stand. "I believe word-of-mouth has done a lot for us," said Landis. "A lot of people told us, 'so-and-so told us about your sweet corn.'

"It's more or less built on reputation here and it really has increased, business-wise," said Landis. He emphasizes quality products as integral to the success of the stand. "We try to give a good product for the price," he said.

Part of good business is keeping up with the pace of demand. In keeping with this idea, Landis plans to serve his clientele by building a farm market on nearby ground. He is hoping the stand will become a reality in the spring of 2001.

Besides selling the traditional produce that the family grows, he also plans to add baked goods to the food offered. Quality will remain unchanged, however, noted Landis.

"The stand is just not big enough. Sometimes in the evening, the cars keep coming and it's hard to close the stand," he said.

Part of the lure of a roadside stand is the convenience of a quick stop, a fact which is not lost on Landis. "People always seem to be in a hurry. They want it convenient to park and walk up," he said. "They don't want to walk indoors."

Landis is taking that into consideration with his next establishment by planning a design with a large entryway.

Since fresh produce has such a short shelf life, Landis found alternate markets for his products. Besides supplying some products to area restaurants, the Landis family also sells excess products to Leola produce auction.

Publication Examines Greenhouse Options For Homeowners, Gardeners

ITHACA, N.Y. — Whether it means tending to a collection of exotic houseplants or cultivating a year-round crop of vegetables, greenhouse gardening appeals to many people for many different reasons.

A greenhouse can help garden enthusiasts get through the cold part of the year. It fills a void during winter, when weather prohibits gardening outdoors.

Home greenhouses are ideal for introducing children to nature and showing them how seeds develop into flowering plants or nutritious vegetables. Retirees often adopt greenhouse gardening as a hobby to enjoy during their retirement years.

"Greenhouses for Homeowners and Gardeners," originally published June 2000 ($25 plus S&H/sales tax, 214 pages) will help readers select and design the most appropriate size and style of greenhouse to fit their needs, find the best place to locate a greenhouse, and decide whether to build a greenhouse themselves or hire a contractor to do it. This comprehensive, easy-to-read book covers every style and type of greenhouse — from relatively inexpensive film-plastic-covered growing spaces to custom-designed, cozy sunspaces that extend the living space within the home.

The book addresses a wide audience, including gardeners, homeowners, cooperative extension educators, and institutions (such as retirement homes, schools, and prison associations). Small farmers may also find the book useful.

The book contains eight chapters on the following topics: greenhouse basics, selecting a greenhouse, greenhouse planning, framing materials and glazing, greenhouse layouts and equipment, the greenhouse environment, window greenhouses and growth chambers, and garden structures. With this book, aspiring and practicing greenhouse operators will be able to make informed decisions about foundations, glazing and framing materials, space utilization, interior design, heating and cooling systems, supplemental lighting, watering and fertilizing systems, and other greenhouse design and construction issues. The garden structures chapter covers the design, construction, and use of cold frames, hotbeds, shade houses, rowcovers, and high tunnels.

About 150 line drawings illustrate the 214-page book to help readers visualize the way greenhouses are built, evaluate alternative methods of construction, design interiors, select labor-saving equipment, and understand the skills involved in designing, building, and operating a greenhouse.

Ten diverse do-it-yourself plans for home greenhouses and other garden structures are provided in an appendix. Each plan includes materials lists and construction diagrams and details. Three additional appendixes contain a greenhouse maintenance checklist, lists of greenhouse and equipment suppliers, and useful conversions. A glossary of terms that might be unfamiliar to readers and an index are included as well.

"Greenhouses for Homeowners and Gardeners" was written by John W. Bartok, Jr., professor emeritus in the Department of Natural Resources Management and Engineering at the University of Connecticut.

The book, NRAES-137, is available for $25 per copy plus shipping and handling from NRAES, Cooperative Extension, 152 Riley-Robb Hall, Ithaca, NY 14853-5701. Shipping and handling for one copy is $5.50 within the continental U.S. New York residents add eight percent sales tax (calculated on both the cost of publications and the shipping and handling charges).

Berries: Alternative Cash Crop That Packs A Healthy Punch

PIKETON, Ohio — With interest in berries growing because of their potential health benefits, it's no surprise that consumer demand has turned the fruits into promising alternative cash crops. So why aren't more Ohio farmers growing them?

Sandy Kuhn, berry coordinator at the Ohio State University Piketon Research and Extension Center, attributes the uncertainty to factors ranging from plant hardiness and availability to labor intensive harvesting and large initial investments with slow profit turnaround.

Despite the limitations, however, farmers are giving berry growing a shot.

"Berry growing is a real challenge for farmers, but they are very open to it," said Kuhn. "If farmers are patient enough, berries can produce a high return of investment for them, more than corn or beans. There's such a demand for berries. The markets can't get enough of them."

For example, Kuhn said, Beuhler's Market in Wooster, Ohio, will buy as many raspberries harvested from Ohio berry producers it can because demand is so high the store has no problems selling its stock.

The most current census shows that berries, including strawberries, blackberries, blueberries and raspberries, are being grown on more than 1,300 acres on approximately 570 farms throughout Ohio.

Raspberries make up about 200 of the 1,300 acres. Kuhn said that most of the farms are small pick-your-own operations, but a few farmers have turned their fields into larger enterprises. One farmer in Wilmington is growing 20 acres of raspberries, while another in South Solon has 25 acres and will plant that many again next year.

Research currently being conducted at the Centers at Piketon involves testing winter-hardy berry varieties. Kuhn said that survivability of the plants is the biggest production issue farmers face. Low supply and high demand is resulting in quick mass production, which may kill the plants under Ohio's harsh winter temperatures.

In addition, farmers are hesitant to grab hold of berry growing due to the stringent economics of the crop. Berries, known as perennial crops because they have a life of more than one year, require a large initial investment and may take several years to turn a profit.

According to Ohio State University Extension agricultural economists, a black raspberry enterprise will require five to six years of growth before the farmer makes any kind of a profit.

Specialty crops generally yield higher profits than field crops on a per-acre basis, but they require much more management and labor per acre than field crops. For example, Extension specialists estimate that returns per acre on strawberries yield $495 in profit compared to $16 per acre on no-till soybeans, but the strawberry fields require 75 hours of labor time compared to only two hours in the soybean fields.

For the past 30 years, studies have shown certain fruits and vegetables to be potential inhibitors of certain cancers. Strawberries and raspberries contain ellagic acid, a natural phenolic compound that functions as an antioxidant in preventing mutations or DNA damage that may lead to cancer.

Gary Stoner, head of the Laboratory of Cancer Chemoprevention and Etiology at OSU James Cancer Hospital and Solove Research Institute, said that freeze-dried berries fed to rats have consistently reduced colon and esophageal cancer rates by at least 50 percent.

The most current research has yielded a 50 percent reduction of esophageal cancer and nearly a 70 percent reduction of colon cancer.

In an unpublished report by Ohio State horticulturist Dick Funt, strawberries, raspberries and blackberries were cited as containing high levels of ellagic acid, found in the pulp, seeds and leaves in varying amounts. The purpose of the study was to determine the levels of ellagic acid in various berry cultivars. The information will help farmers produce berries for health-related products.

In the study, Funt found the variation of ellagic acid content to be cultivar dependent and did not appear to be affected by soil, site location or management practices. In Ohio cultivars, ellagic acid content was found to be highest in the leaves. The seeds of certain black raspberry cultivars contained 12 to 15 times more ellagic acid than the pulp, and ripe seeds contained more ellagic acid than unripe seeds, some by as much as 40 percent.

It is still not known whether ellagic acid is working alone in producing cancer prevention results or if other compounds are involved. Despite this, Stoner said the recent medical findings are so promising that researchers are trying to acquire funding to begin human clinical trials.

"There is a demand in the market for berries now," said Kuhn. "There will be a bigger demand if some of the clinical trials come back positive."

Green Pepper Varieties Resist Bacterial Spot

WOOSTER, Ohio — Ohio State University researchers have confirmed that several commercial green pepper varieties resist bacterial spot, a problematic disease in Ohio that can potentially wipe out an entire infected crop.

Of the 40 varieties studied by OARDC researchers, nearly 70 percent showed significant resistance to bacterial spot. Planting resistant lines is the most effective means of controlling the disease.

Bacterial spot, caused by the bacterium Xanthomonas campestris pv. vesicatoria, is a seed-borne pathogen that attacks the leaves, stem and fruit under wet conditions, causing a reduction in plant growth, yield and quality.

"Bacterial spot is a big problem in Ohio," said Sally Miller, Ohio Agricultural Research and Development plant pathologist. "I've seen fields with total losses from bacterial spot. In a wet year, farmers can lose 50 percent or more of their yield once the crop becomes infected."

At least 11 physiological races of the bacterium have been identified, most of which have been found in Ohio. The resistant pepper varieties identified in the OARDC study are resistant to races 1, 2 and 3, subclasses of the pathogen that are most prevalent in Ohio. Varieties, including Lafayette, Brigadier and Sir Galahad showed only two percent of diseased foliage. Other resistant varieties included Crusader, Red Knight, Ironsides, Goldcoast, Lexington, Intrepid and PR Commandant.

OARDC researchers have also discovered a wild pepper variety, Capsicum pubescens, which appears to resist race six of the pathogen. Though not yet found in Ohio, the race could pose problems for growers as no commercial pepper varieties resist that pathogenic subclass. The wild pepper is grown mainly in South America and has found only a small U.S. market in parts of California.

Miller said that resistance in the wild pepper to bacterial spot is conferred by a single gene, which would make breeding a commercially resistant line that much easier. By comparison, crossing of multiple genes in tomatoes is required to select for resistant bacterial spot varieties.

OARDC does not house a green pepper breeding program, but the research conducted offers farmers a selection of known resistant varieties, as well as providing useful information for pepper breeders to create new commercially resistant lines.

Ohio State University's Website, Ohioline, contains fact sheets on bacterial spot, how to control the disease and what pepper varieties are resistant to it. Refer to www.ohioline.ag.ohio-state.edu/ for more information.

Pennsylvania Green Industry Receives Grower Grants

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania Growers, retailers, and consumers wanting to reduce their dependence on pesticides when producing plant materials and pleasing landscapes will soon get help through newly funded projects.

The Green Industry Grower/Retailer IPM Grants Program funds projects that define a pest related problem or issue in the production, sale or use of green landscape materials and proposes potential solutions using IPM techniques. Farmers, landscapers, foresters, homeowners and others who use IPM often can reduce pesticide use.

This year, two projects were selected to receive IPM Green Industry Grants. The first, entitled "Demonstrating IPM Practices in Display Gardens at York County Nurseries" will be investigated by Penn State extension agents for ornamental horticulture, Tom Becker and Alan H. Michael, and Connie Schmotzer, horticulture assistant for York County. Cooperators in the project are Shiloh Nurseries of Emigsville and Tom Brandt, York County Parks director, York.

The first proposal addresses a plan to pilot the use of several garden centers and nursery facilities for demonstrating IPM practices as well as using an existing research trial garden known as the Penn State Trial Gardens at John Rudy County Park in York County.

By using this opportunity to teach consumers IPM concepts, the investigators believe a new designation for plants that will be marketed starting this year at the retail level will reach its full potential. "PA Gardener Selects™ Plants" represent the best choices for consumers looking for low maintenance bedding plants — ones tolerant of poor soil, drought and avoiding pest problems. "These plants offer an excellent starting point for teaching IPM and especially the use of resistant plants and IPM predicators like key location, plant and pest problems," explains Penn State Extension Agent Tom Becker.

The project will demonstrate how Extension can develop localized, consumer-friendly summaries describing plants, pests or locations specific to the type of gardens and landscapes popular with consumers today. "New and seasonal green industry employees who suggest plants for new or renovated areas can quickly refer to these summaries. Additionally, Master Gardeners volunteering at the Extension office will be more prepared to diagnose pest problems for consumers," said Becker.

The second project, entitled "Biologically Based Management of Western Flower Thrips" is being investigated by Kelli Hoover, assistant professor of entomology, Penn State; Robert Berghage, assistant professor of horticulture, Penn State, and Scott Ludwig, research assistant, entomology, Penn State Cooperators in the project are Judy Smith, independent scout, Capitol Region Crop Management Association and Karl Lederer, Herman Lederer and Sons Greenhouse, Parker Ford.

The investigators in the project aim to reduce insecticides used in controlling western flower thrips on African violets in greenhouse settings by using medium drenches of three insect growth regulators. The use of medium drenches should reduce the number of insecticide applications required, reducing the likelihood that insecticide resistance will develop. In addition, reducing the number of sprays of classical insecticides applied to foliage will permit the use of natural enemies as a management option to control thrips and other pests.

At the end of the experiments the number of insecticide applications for each treatment will be evaluated to determine if the media drenches reduced the number of sprays. "These results will not only be applicable to controlling thrips on African violets but also for most potted flowers and greenhouse-grown vegetable crops," said project investigator Scott Ludwig.

Problems addressed by the funded projects are ones faced by and will benefit other growers, retailers, and consumers throughout the state. Grant recipients are expected to share information about their projects, including all results, with other members of the grower/retailer/consumer community.

The grants will run from July 2, 1000 through September 30, 2001 with a final report of results due by Oct. 31, 2001.

The Green Industry Grower/Retailer IPM Grants Program is a special initiative of the PA IPM Program. For more information, contact Lee G. Bentz, IPM coordinator, at (717) 772-5204 or visit the program's website at http://paipm.cas.psu.edu.

Tree Fruit Growers Get Pest Advice From Toll-Free Hotline

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Pennsylvania tree fruit growers now can get the latest pest and pest management information for their orchards through a toll-free hotline operated by the Pennsylvania Integrated Pest Management (IPM) Program.

The hotline, (800) PENN-IPM, also provides pest information for other crops, including sweet corn, potatoes, tomatoes, turfgrass, and ornamental plants. Callers also can find out about scheduled pesticide applicator training sessions and other meetings of interest to growers.

Tree fruit information on the hotline includes pest and beneficial insect development for regions across the state, helping growers to determine which pests to scout for at different times during the season. The hotline also informs growers how to use pesticides properly.

Messages at (800) PENN-IPM are updated frequently during the growing season — sometimes as often as daily during critical management periods — and are available 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Greg Krawczyk, research associate at the Penn State Fruit Research and Extension Center in Biglerville, said the hotline summarizes information from Penn State's Tree Fruit Production Guide and from the center's "Fruit Times" newsletter. The bi-weekly newsletter is published April through October and is found online at http://hortweb.cas.psu.edu/treefruit/Ftimes.html.

Cornell's Updated Greenhouse Guide Shows How To Do Your Plants A Favor

ITHACA, N.Y. — Have you ever wondered how to use yellow sticky cards to count whiteflies in a geranium greenhouse? Or the best way to use fava bean plants to spot the presence of virus-carrying thrips? Do you know how to use duct tape to help your plants?

Those questions and many others are answered in the new edition of "Integrated Pest Management for Bedding Plants: A Scouting and Pest Management Guide" from Cornell University's New York State Integrated Pest Management Program (IPM).

This popular pocket guide covers managing greenhouse pests on annuals, perennials, herbs, vegetable transplants, foliage plants and flowering potted plants that are commonly produced in the greenhouse between January and July. Intended as a training guide for pest scouts, it's useful for private consultants, growers, greenhouse managers, pesticide applicators and students.

Edited by Christine Casey, a former Cornell IPM extension educator, the 117-page spiral-bound paperback now contains 41 color photographs, illustrations, expanded grower case studies, easy-to-use indexes, information from experts, scouting forms and an updated bibliography. In fact, the book is sturdy enough to endure greenhouse conditions.

It's a concise how-to guide for starting and operating a successful IPM program in greenhouses while maintaining profitable crop production. Readers will learn to identify and monitor common insect pests, diseases and nutrient deficiencies.

The guide also aids in developing an integrated pest-management plan; scouting techniques for insect pests and diseases; coping with noncontagious disorders such as nutrient deficiencies or spray injuries; weed management; and the successful use of biological control agents.

The book provides many answers to common plant problems:

- Yellow sticky cards attract such troublesome insect pests as thrips. Once stuck to the card's adhesive, these small insects easily can be counted. Save time by counting only those insects found in a one-inch vertical strip in the center of the card.
- Petunias and fava beans are good protectors of valuable plants such as poinsettias because both quickly indicate the presence of virus-carrying thrips. If planted at the same time as the poinsettias, these indicator plants will develop viral symptoms within a week if fed on by infected thrips.
- Duct tape wrapped on greenhouse workbench legs, with the adhesive side out, will reveal if slugs are moving from the greenhouse floor to your benches. Their slime trails will be visible on the tape.
- Insects dictate greenhouse fashion and are attracted by yellow, blue and other light-colored fabrics. Greenhouse workers should avoid wearing these colors to minimize the possibility of carrying insects from one area to another on their clothing.
- Tomato plants provide an early warning system, as they react quickly to the presence of ethylene, released when a gas heater burns inefficiently. The gas causes various plant problems including growth abnormalities, flower drop and leaf discoloration.

"Integrated Pest Management for Bedding Plants: A Scouting and Pest Management Guide" (Book 102IPM407), costs $14.50, which includes shipping. Order from the Cornell Resource Center, Cornell University, 7 Business and Technology Park, Ithaca, NY 14850. Or order by phone, (607) 255-2080, or send e-mail to resctr@cornell.edu.

You Shall Never See Anything As Lovely As These Trees

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — In the not-so-distant past, trees largely were chosen for their shade and climbing potential.

A landscape tree expert in Penn States College of Agricultural Sciences said selecting a tree is just as important an aesthetic decision as decorating the dining room or choosing a painting for the living room.

"The first priority for choosing a tree is whether it is suitable to the site," explained Jim Sellmer, assistant professor of ornamental horticulture. "But appearance, fragrance, and texture can be just as important to the overall look of your landscape."

Trees with unique flowers, bark color, or other qualities can enhance the image and look of a home, providing consistent or seasonally changing visual stimuli to onlookers.

Sellmer recommends trees with specific aesthetic attributes.

Trees With Fragrant Flowers

Both large shade trees and small flowering trees produce fragrant flowers during the year. "With some planning and preparation, homeowners can plant trees with overlapping bloom periods," Sellmer said.

The following trees offer overlapping bloom. However, with ever-increasing varieties being introduced, many of the plants below offer overlapping blooms among individual varieties.

- Star Magnolia — blooms in mid-April
- Flowering Cherry (Prunus) — blooms in late April
- Crab Apple (Malus) — blooms in May
- Mountain Ash (Sorbus) — blooms in late May
- Sweet Bay Magnolia — blooms in late May
- Japanese Snowball (Styrax) — blooms May to June
- Tree Lilac (Syringa) — blooms in early June
- White Fringe Tree (Chionanthus) — blooms in early June
- Linden (Tilia) — blooms in early July
- Silk Tree (Albizia) — blooms in July
- Sourwood (Oxydendrum) — blooms mid-July
- Japanese Pagoda Tree (Sophora) — blooms in August.

Trees With Colored Bark

Often overlooked as a visual quality, bark color can add to the look of a landscape — particularly in winter. "Some bark characteristics are more prominent on mature trees," Sellmer said.

"Any tree with interesting bark should be planted in a conspicuous location."

- Gray bark: American yellowwood, beech, elm, hackberry, hornbeam, juneberry, mountain ash, red maple and saucer magnolia.
- White bark: Whitespire, Gray birch, white poplar, paper birch and river birch.
- Red/Brown bark: Flowering cherry (and most other Prunus species), Japanese tree lilac, and Paperbark Maple.
- Colored Twigs: Flowering Dogwood (greenish red); Japanese Pagoda Tree (bright green); Japanese Maple (red); Sourwood (red); and Striped Maple (green with stripes).

Trees With Textured Bark

"A variety of bark textures can complement the landscape plantings," Sellmer said. "Trees that shed bark create unique patterns on the trunk and smooth barks can stand out as well."

- Shedding Bark: Birch (white, yellow or reddish — peels laterally); Eastern Redbud (small plates, orangish beneath); Hawthorn (small irregular plates, lighter beneath); Japanese Zelkova (irregular patches, orangish beneath); Kousa Dogwood (irregular plates, yellowish beneath); Amur Maackia (shining, amber brown); Paperbark Maple (reddish — peels laterally); Parrotia (gray, green, white and brown mosaic patches); and Sycamore (large irregular patches, cream colored beneath).
- Smooth Bark: Yellowwood, Beech, Hornbeam, Juneberry, Magnolia and Mountain Ash.
- Cork-like Bark: Amur Corktree and Common Hackberry — both gray in color.

Trees With Attractive Flowers

All trees, at one time or another, will set flowers, but flowering trees are more noticeable if they are small in stature. "Large shade trees usually have attractive flower crops," Sellmer explained.

"The height of the tree may reduce your ability to see and enjoy them."

Small Trees (35 feet or lower): Crabapple (white, pink, and deep red varieties); Eastern Redbud (deep pink); Flowering Cherry (pinkish); Silk tree (pink to red); Red Buckeye (red); Dogwood, Hawthorn, Japanese Tree lilac, Stewartia, Maackia, Styrax, Juneberry, Mountain Ash, Silver Bell, Snowbell and White Fringe tree (white).

Medium Trees (35 to 75 feet): Japanese Pagoda Tree and Yellowwood (creamy white); Goldenrain Tree (deep yellow); Linden (green and white); Magnolia (white to pink); and Pear and Sourwood (white).

Large Trees (75 feet or more): Horsechestnut (white erect spikes); Red Maple (red); and Tulip poplar (orangish yellow).

NRAES Releases Strawberry Production Guide

ITHACA, N.Y. — If you are a strawberry grower or an adviser to growers, you won't want to miss the "Strawberry Production Guide for the Northeast, Midwest and Eastern Canada," NRAES-88, a publication from NRAES, the Natural Resource, Agriculture, and Engineering Service.

It is the most comprehensive production guide ever produced for strawberry growers. The guide focuses on production practices popular in northeastern North America, but it contains pertinent information for anyone involved in growing berries.

Awarded a blue ribbon in the 1998 ASAE Educational Aids Competition, the "Strawberry Production Guide" is 162 pages long and contains 14 chapters, 37 figures, 47 tables, and 115 full-color photographs. It provides up-to-date, in-depth coverage of every aspect of strawberry culture — from preparing the production site to harvesting and marketing. It is sure to be a valuable resource for both experienced and novice growers. The guide comes in a three-ring binder.

Chapter 1 traces the history of the modern cultivated strawberry and provides a detailed discussion of the structure and development of the plant and the development of flower clusters and fruit. Chapters 2 through 4 focus on the basics of production: site selection and preparation, plant selection, and production systems. Site preparation procedures such as eradicating weeds and checking soil nutrient levels are covered, and 17 preplant cover crops are described in detail. The plant selection chapter points out factors to consider when selecting from the smorgasbord of available varieties. Thirty-four popular varieties are rated for important characteristics such as flavor, yield, berry size, and disease resistance.

Production systems discussed include matted rows, ribbon rows, waiting beds, annual plasticulture, dayneutral production, and protected cultivation. Organic production is reviewed as well.

Chapters 5 through 7 cover the management of temperature, water, and nutrients. The management of troublesome pests, diseases, physiological disorders, and weeds is reviewed in chapters 8 through 10. Many of the color photographs in the book will help readers identify pests and symptoms of diseases and disorders. Several strategies are offered for weed control before and after planting, either with or without chemicals.

Spray equipment for applying crop protectants and nutrients is reviewed in chapter 11. Chapters 12 and 13 give tips for harvesting, handling, transporting, and marketing fresh fruit. Marketing value-added products such as jelly and wine and setting a fair price for berries are topics discussed in the marketing chapter.

The final chapter, budgeting, guides readers through sample budgets that reflect typical costs as well as costs that many growers overlook. The budget spreadsheets used in the chapter are provided on a floppy disk included with the book at no extra cost. Growers can adjust the values in the spreadsheets to reflect their actual costs, and the program will automatically calculate the resulting effect on total costs and profits. Microsoft Excel, version 4.0 or higher, or a compatible spreadsheet program is required to access the spreadsheets. The book also features a key to common strawberry pests and problems, a glossary, a table of conversion factors, and information about membership in the North American Strawberry Growers Association.

The guide was written by 16 experts representing eight universities. It was edited by Marvin Pritts, a horticulturist with the Department of Fruit and Vegetable Science at Cornell University, and David Handley, an extension horticulturist with the University of Maine at Highmoor Farm.

The "Strawberry Production Guide for the Northeast, Midwest, and Eastern Canada," NRAES-88, is available for $45 per copy (plus shipping and handling) from NRAES, Cooperative Extension, 152 Riley-Robb Hall, Ithaca, NY 14853-5701. Quantity discounts are available. The shipping and handling charge is $5.50 for a single copy within the continental U.S. (New York State residents must add 8 percent sales tax on the total including shipping and handling.) If ordering more than one copy or if ordering from outside the continental U.S., contact NRAES for shipping costs. Orders from outside the United States must be prepaid in U.S. funds. Major credit cards are accepted, and checks should be made payable to NRAES. For information about quantity discounts, or for a free publications catalog, contact NRAES by phone at (607) 255-7654, by fax at (607) 254-8770, or by e-mail at NRAES@CORNELL.EDU.

CSAs, Farmers' Markets Crucial To Consumers

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Many people from the city — in this case, Philadelphia — buy lots of food from farmers' markets.

What growers need to understand is the market is available, ready, and willing to pay top dollar for the best produce.

"For people in the city, their only connection to nature is through food," said Claudia Raab, a volunteer working with the Farm To City Program.

The program helps connect farmers to markets in the Philadelphia area. It also provides advice to starting cooperative markets, buyers' collaboratives, and other items of interest to the produce grower.

Raab, who has lived 18 years in the city and who, according to the Oley Institute, understands the "psychology of food," said farmers' markets may truly be city folks' only connection with nature.

"We see how clean and pure food from local farmers is," Raab said.

The idea of picking up locally grown produce is so important to many city residents that it can be an almost "spiritual thing," Raab said. "You have this amazing soil out here."

She said an investment in farmers' markets in the city continues to attract many buyers who are willing to pay top dollar for that local connection.

"We want you to keep doing it," she said.

Raab, along with others from Farm to City, spoke in mid-January at the annual New Holland Vegetable Day at Yoder's Restaurant.

Raab said that farmers' markets and farm-grower cooperatives, such as the Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) groups, allow her and others to purchase the best produce around.

Raab said that she would even pay $4 a pound for certain potatoes, if they are grown locally. "I'll buy them," she said. "I'm interested in flavor and things not available before." Those include heirloom vegetables and uncommon fruit and vegetable varieties.

Raab said Philadelphia chefs will sometimes list the crops grown and from what farm on the menu. "That is worth money," she said. "People love to come in and know those things."

Bob Pierson, of Farm to City, spoke about how important farmers' markets can be to both the grower and the consumer.

Pierson also spoke about the growth of CSA operations that are springing up in the area.

CSAs offer a "subscription" fee for those who want produce. Often, CSA members pay a fee and then can pick up produce when seasonally available.

The CSA "helps (consumers) reestablish the connection to the land they felt they have lost," said Pierson. "I have seen it . . . and it's heartfelt."

As a rule, one acre of land will provide enough produce for about 20 shares of the CSA subscription "stock." About 100 shares at $400 each would provide a gross of $40,000 on five acres of CSA land.

It's important to start small, with perhaps 25 shareholders, and eventually build the market.

The CSA is a "marketing technique and a way of life," Pierson said. Many CSAs are organic or biodynamic.

CSA owners need to "manage (subscriber) expectations," said Pierson.

There are about a thousand CSAs in the U.S. Many operate on a shareholder basis, subscription basis, as a farmer cooperative, or on a co-own land basis.

Important elements are a variety of crops, crop rotation and succession, hours of operation, and availability of produce. High tunnels for season extension would come in handy.

Also, successful CSAs learn quickly how to plan children events at the farm, let customers know about seasonality of produce, provide recipe cards, conduct cooking demonstrations, provide price sheet for other items, and publish a regular newsletter for members.

Two important books are "Sharing the Harvest" by Elizabeth Henderson and "Sustainable Vegetable Production: From Startup To Market," Pierson noted.

The Farm to City program is a service that can help recruit shareholders, arrange client site, provide site management, help build up the CSA, help coordinate special events, and do bookwork for some of the gross income.

For growers who want to start a CSA, it's important to have a plan for growing many products, according to Joe Griffin, president of the Oley Institute and manager of Covered Bridge Produce.

Griffin, a certified organic produce grower, said that Philadelphians "think they need food grown from Florida and California. But they could be eating a lot more produce grown in Lancaster County, Berks County, Chester County."

CSAs charge anywhere from $250-$425 per family, depending on the size of the operation, crops grown, and other factors. CSAs began in the mid-1980s and expanded through the '90s.

And Philadelphia's six or seven farmers' markets are now accepting about $1.2 million in food subsidies from the Women, Infants, and Children (WIC) program. In 1999, according to Pierson of Farm to City, the markets received only $10,000 of the WIC money.

Griffin of the Oley Institute noted that some farmers' markets can benefit in a time when growers, who take a box of produce to one of the Lancaster County auctions and received 15 cents a pound, can take the same and sell it at the market for $2 a pound.

Once, a box that garnered him a bid of $1 at a Berks County auction was sold for $15 at a farmers' market.

"There's a big gap between what the farmer gets and the consumer pays," said Griffin.

For more information about farmers' markets, contact Pierson at Farm to City, 318 Gaskill St., Philadelphia,

Penn State Team Wins Awards For Plum Pox Disease Response

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — A Penn State extension and research program developed in response to an outbreak of plum pox — a viral disease of peaches and other stone fruits — has been recognized with Awards of Excellence from both the Northeast Extension Directors and the Northeast Experiment Station Directors.

"The plum pox initiative is a great example of extension and research partnering with government agencies and producers to address a critical, potentially devastating problem," said Theodore Alter, director of Penn State Cooperative Extension and associate dean in the College of Agricultural Sciences. Alter noted that the Northeast Extension Directors nominated 17 programs in 13 states for recognition, and only two received that group's Award of Excellence.

In 1999, the plum pox virus, also known as sharka, was discovered for the first time in North America in Adams County, the top fruit-producing county in Pennsylvania. Spread by aphids, the virus causes round spots on fruit, leaves, stems and seeds. The disease does not kill trees and is harmless to humans, but it makes fruit unmarketable and drastically reduces yields. Left unchecked it could devastate Pennsylvania's $25-million-a-year stone fruit industry.

Infected trees must be destroyed to prevent the disease from spreading. As part of the plum pox eradication effort, more than one-third of Adams County's peach and nectarine acreage was taken out of production, and a quarantine was imposed on the movement of susceptible trees and propagation material within or from the affected area.

Shortly after the disease was identified in Pennsylvania, Penn State Cooperative Extension educators and College of Agricultural Sciences researchers joined forces with the state and federal departments of agriculture, growers' associations, legislators and community leaders to develop a rapid-response research and educational program.

In December 1999, Penn State teamed with the federal and state agriculture departments to organize a plum pox symposium, which brought in European scientists to share their knowledge and experience in fighting the virus.

Over the next year, Penn State held a series of educational meetings and seminars for growers, extension agents, researchers and the public, focusing on plum pox identification and management.

Penn State Cooperative Extension Master Gardeners helped survey and educate homeowners and backyard fruit growers in the quarantine area, and Penn State personnel were guests on numerous radio and television programs covering the plum pox situation. Educational materials also were developed, including a video, a World Wide Web site (http://sharka.cas.psu.edu) and an eight-page, full-color pamphlet.

All these efforts, combined with the work of Penn State agricultural economists in assessing the economic impact of the outbreak, helped lead to a state- and federally supported indemnification program to help offset growers' costs for destruction of trees and lost production. The program also provided information that led Canadian officials to the discovery of plum pox on the Niagara Peninsula.

"This program has done a great deal to blunt the impact of a very damaging disease," said Paul Backman, director of the Pennsylvania Agricultural Experiment Station and associate dean for research in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. "As a result of this collaborative effort, there are strong prospects of eliminating the plum pox virus from the United States."

Members of the project team, listed alphabetically, are plant pathologist Herbert Cole, professor of agricultural sciences; Thomas Garretson, fruit integrated pest management extension agent in Adams County; Frederick Gildow, professor of plant pathology; John Halbrendt, associate professor of plant pathology; Jayson Harper, associate professor of agricultural economics; Larry Hull, professor of entomology and scientist-in-charge of Penn State's Fruit Research and Extension Center in Biglerville; Lynn Kime, ag economic development extension agent in Adams County; William Kleiner, county extension director and fruit extension agent in Adams County; Greg Krawczyk, entomology research associate; and James Travis, professor of plant pathology extension.

Dr. Cindy's Focus On Family Helps Insure Business Stability

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Dr. Cindy Iannarelli has had her share of rescuing family businesses from plight.

According to "Dr. Cindy," the name her clients know her best, what's the greatest mistake an owner of a business, such as a farm market, can make?

It's "not talking about the business at the dinner table," said Dr. Cindy. "It's the worst mistake you can make for your children."

Dr. Cindy spoke to a few dozen growers and agri-industry representatives in early February at the Mid-Atlantic Fruit and Vegetable Convention at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center.

Dr. Cindy reviewed several myths of operating a family business. She has come up with strategies in which her own consulting firm, Dr. Cindy Iannarelli's Business Cents, helps other businesses to cope.

Dr. Cindy noted the dire statistics for family businesses. She said that of 100 businesses started by the first generation, only 30 percent survive to the second. Of those, only 10 percent survive to the third generation.

Of the 100 started, only three survive "due not to business reasons, but to family reasons," she said.

"It's sad to see how families can actually disintegrate over issues of family business," she told farm market owners and operators at the convention.

What's fair in the house is not always fair in the business, she said. But the earlier you begin involving children in the business, the more communication and training you do for them, "the better chance you have of importing business sense to them," Dr. Cindy said.

She spoke about growing up in Bridgeville in western Pennsylvania, near Pittsburgh. Her father was an immigrant from Italy.

He came to the states with $500 to start his own dry-cleaning business in the early 1950s. He rented a storefront, put up a sign, worked at a front counter with a cash register — and took all the clothing to a friend's business to dry clean, returning it on time for customers.

The dry-cleaning business "was our life," Dr. Cindy said. She lived and breathed the business growing up — until her father died unexpectedly, leaving his wife in charge.

Her parents had other plans for Cindy and her brother, including something "better," she said.

"My father wanted us to have educational programs," said Dr. Cindy, to be either a pharmacist, doctor, accountant, or attorney — customers her father believed had it better than most (working a simple 9 to 5 shift, rather than the countless hours her own father put in).

Their father died while both Cindy and her brother were in college, leaving their mother with 100 employees in 10 locations.

The next three years, Dr. Cindy said, "were like a living hell."

Dr. Cindy learned, and advised her mother on a variety of issues that allowed the business to stay viable. Her real-world education allowed her to develop her doctorate program that looked into the issues of family businesses, while using the business as "a classroom," she said.

The following are several studies of the "myths" about family businesses:

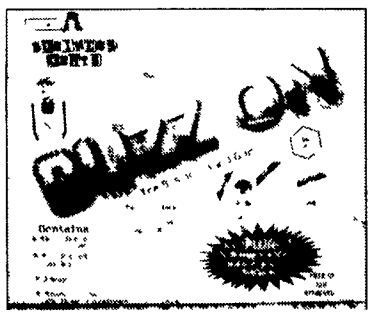
• Myth 10: "We've never had a family meeting, so how can we start now?" Someone — not the leader of the business — should command this meeting. You have to go beyond any tensions and have this for the sake of general business planning.

• Myth 9: "Nobody knows our own business like us. Why have outsiders?" Develop a board of directors from a noncompetitive area. This neutrality can be critical to the conduct of the business.

• Myth 8: "Each of my children have different needs, so I pay them accordingly." Forget giving anyone preferential treatment. Pay all by industry standards.

• Myth 7: "If I die, my spouse and five children will work things out together." If you did die, as a business owner, what is going to happen? Estate planning will help decide who will run the business and in what capacity. Insurance is critical.

• Myth 6: "Everyone in the family should be happy, so we avoid areas where conflicts arise." Raise these issues at family meetings. Dr. Cindy advised reading many good business family strategy books. Baby boomers stand to inherit the largest windfall in history from inheritance — $10.4 trillion — so preparation is critical.



Even kid games are critical to developing "business cents" with Dr. Cindy's program.

• Myth 5: "My wife wants to be fair to all the children, so we will divide the business equally." This may be completely unreasonable. Everyone wants to make sure they are treated fairly, but is this always reasonable?

• Myth 4: "My girls are not interested in the business." Not true, in cases where the business owners didn't pay attention at the dinner table to what younger siblings had in mind.

• Myth 3: "The kids are teen-agers, and too young to think about the business." It's important to train and develop a plan early.

• Myth 2: "Why sell the business to the children when they expect us to leave it to them?" Begin estate transfer planning early.

• Myth 1: "When my children enter the business, they can just watch me and learn what to do." It's important to train them early and often to create successor development.

One person needs to be a champion of these issues in every family business, according to Dr. Cindy. And some start early — one business she dealt with had a "100-year plan" in place for the family.

"A family meeting on a regular basis to talk about family business and how it affects them is so important," she said.

Use Of Genetically Modified Plants (GMP) In Crop Rotation Sequences With Vegetables

M.D. Orzolek
Department of Horticulture
Penn State

Within the last three years, availability of genetically modified plants, especially field corn and soybeans, has been cited as a major advancement in the production of these field crops.

Unfortunately, herbicide resistance of genetically engineered field corn and soybeans is not viewed as an achievement for vegetable growers in the state.

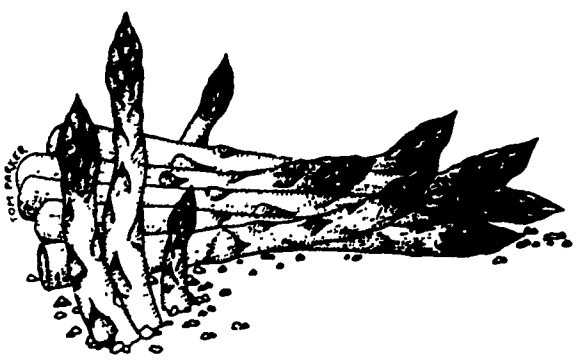
Glyphosate (Roundup), imidazolinone (Pursuit, Scepter), and sulfonylurea (Classic, Accent, Beacon, Harmony, Oust, Ally) resistant field corn and soybean varieties now being grown by many grain farmers can have dire consequences if placed in a rotation with vegetables.

With regard to Roundup ready corn and soybeans, while glyphosate does not cause any residual problem, spraying the corn or beans on a windy day near sensitive vegetable crops can be disastrous and result in stunting of the vegetable crop, delay in maturity, reduced yield and in certain severe cases, plant mortality. Postemergence applications of Roundup must be planned in context to the total cropping sequence on your farm and the need to identify locations where significant economic loss can occur with drift from Roundup.

With respect to the postemergence application of sulfonylurea and imidazolinone herbicides, generally the off-target drift may not be as serious a problem as the residual effect from both of these herbicide families. Soil pH levels above 6.8 favor the persistence of sulfonylurea type herbicides that could affect some vegetable crops in rotation. In addition, sulfonylurea herbicides are applied at recommended rates of 0.5 to 6.0 ounces of active ingredient per acre.

Any increase in the rates of sulfonylurea herbicides whether for insurance or miscalculation can cause serious residual problems on some vegetable crops. The imidazolinone herbicides will cause similar problems as the sulfonylurea herbicides with the addition that only legumes should follow legumes with the use of imidazolinone applied herbicides. Non-legume vegetables have demonstrated severe stunting planted after an imidazolinone ready soybean crop or after application of Pursuit to labeled crops like peas and snap beans.

Use of herbicide resistant agronomic crops requires more intensive and long-range planning for vegetable growers who plant them in their crop rotation programs.



Jellyfish Protein May Aid In Improving Plant Development

WOOSTER, Ohio — A fluorescent protein found in jellyfish may help plants signal when they are cold or need to be watered.

John Finer, Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center scientist, is studying gene expression in plants through the use of green fluorescent protein (GFP), a protein found in the Pacific jellyfish that gives off a green glow when excited by high intensity blue or white light.

GFP, widely used by scientists as a marker to monitor gene expression, has been expressed in bacteria, yeast, slime, mold, plants, the fruit fly and mammalian cells. Finer is producing plants that contain the GFP gene. He hopes that through such research, it may be possible to introduce other genes in plants that would sustain adverse environmental conditions such as cold, heat, drought or flooding.

"Through the use of GFP, the process of genetic engineering can be more efficient," said Finer. "We can use genetic engineering to impart stress-resistant characteristics in plants, to modify growth habits, to make sure everything in the plant is working the way it's supposed to be working."

Finer is studying GFP expression in the Christmas cactus, a slow-growing ornamental tropical house plant that is fairly tolerant of adverse environmental conditions. His work so far has yielded small root structures that, when observed under a microscope, glow green when illuminated with blue light.

"This type of work has never been done before with Christmas cactus," said Finer. "We have no idea what the plant will look like. The idea was to see if we could produce a genetically engineered cactus and observe the aesthetic changes, if any developed."

The idea of using GFP in the plant is to track specific genes in the plant as it grows. For example, genes that exhibit stress tolerances, impart specific leaf color, or promote certain growth characteristics will glow if present. The trick is to maintain the presence of that gene throughout the growth and development of the plant.

Said Finer, "The gene could be expressed in the cell during it's initial stage of growth, but then disappear later on in development."

The research may not have immediate practical applications, but depending on the final results, could produce promising marketing opportunities in the field of ornamentals.

Speciality Crop Research Provides Growers Farming Alternatives

PIKETON, Ohio — The next time you find eggplant, cluster tomatoes, or seedless cucumbers at your local grocery store, check the label. The crops may be Ohio-grown.

Promising research results, coupled with a growing market demand and potential profit, are giving state growers an opportunity to supplement or expand their business from traditional field crops to specialty fruits and vegetables.

The Ohio State University Piketon Agricultural Research and Extension Center has taken the reins in the field of speciality crop research, studying the economic and environmental feasibility of successfully growing cash crops in Ohio, both in the field and in the greenhouse.

"The idea of growing income-producing crops in Ohio has really taken off." said Brad Bergefurd, OSU extension agent for the Centers at Piketon. "We've collected enough data from 1995, 1996, and 2000 to know that raising speciality crops is a pretty good recommendation for growers. The market is definitely there for it."

Researchers at the Centers at Piketon are studying a smorgasbord of speciality crops, including berries, tomatoes, cucumbers, lettuce, the Asian eggplant, bitter melon and the sweet potato, and the techniques that would provide the best yields both in the greenhouse and under Ohio's climate.

Greenhouse crop production is of special interest for farmers, specifically tobacco growers. Said Bergefurd, "Tobacco growers traditionally have their own greenhouses and they are looking for alternative crops to raise in between tobacco growing. Plus, they have all this space in the greenhouse that is not being utilized in the off season."

Innovative and revamped greenhouse growing techniques have allowed researchers to focus on speciality tomatoes, such as cherry tomatoes and cluster tomatoes like those grown in Holland, seedless cucumbers, raspberries, strawberries and leafy and bibb types of lettuces.

"We can grow the raspberry plants throughout the summer, chill them down in the fall, defrost them in the greenhouse and force fruit production and harvest the next March or April," said Bergefurd. "And the berries are of better quality because they are not exposed to typical outdoors environmental conditions. The technology originated in New York was just revamped for southern Ohio conditions."

Researchers have also adopted the float bed technique popular with tobacco farmers to vegetable production. The system, involving plant-filled Styrofoam trays floating on a bed of water, supports a variety of green vegetables and herbs, including leaf lettuce, mizuna spinach, mint, and basil.

Greenhouse production at the center involves hydroponic strawberries, a project sparked by growers who were interested in raising berries all season. "We are looking at berries grown in pots and in bags and comparing the two systems to see which one produces the best growing situation without sacrificing yield," said Christie Welch, horticulture program research assistant.

Field studies at the Centers at Piketon have seen success in growing Asian eggplant and bitter melon, two exotic fruits that have found a niche in Ohio's growing Asian and Mediterranean markets. The crops, which have adapted well to Ohio's climate and appear to resist major insects and diseases, are a hit with statewide produce markets looking for a local supplier of exotic and unusual commodities.

"Produce buyers are very pleased that the crops are grown locally and that they may be able to secure a local supply," said Matt Kleinhenz, Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center researcher. "On several occasions, produce buyers have indicated that they will work with their growers to secure these new commodities."

That's good news for farmers looking to raise a new product. And if consumer demand is not convincing enough, a bountiful pocketbook just might be. Specialty crops, such as raspberries and strawberries for example, generate a higher rate of return than traditional crops. Though the process is labor intensive, initially expensive and involves several years of patience, the end results can be profitable for a farmer. For example, strawberries generate 30 times more profit per acre than no-till soybeans.

Bottom Heat Your Seed Flats For Less Disease

With all of the concerns as to the high costs associated with heating the greenhouse it is hard to believe that I would be trying to convince growers to use more heat.

Well, I'm not. I am telling you if you use the heated air you have more efficiently you can cut down on the amount of disease you see, particularly in the early stages of production.

Many of the diseases associated with seeds and seedlings are enhanced by cool temperatures. In many cases the pathogens that cause disease are more active at cool temperatures and in cool temperatures the seeds and seedlings are less active. This scenario has the potential to be a real problem.

One of the most common mistakes a grower makes is to put seed or seeding flats on an unheated floor. The unheated the floor of the greenhouse is the coolest place in the greenhouse. This is particularly the case when if the floor is concrete or bare soil.

The temperature of this type of floor can be 40 or 60 degrees. Under these conditions most seeds will take longer to germinate than they should and they will be exposed to pathogenic fungi such as Pythium sp. and Fusarium sp.

If the surface under the seed flats were heated to the ideal temperature for seed germination the seed would germinate sooner and be less likely to be affected by disease. Even after the seeds germinate and emerge from the medium bottom heat is a good idea. Seedings can be affected by post-emergence diseases caused by Pythium sp., Rhizoctonia sp. and Botrytis sp.

What can a grower do besides cranking up the heat or installing heated floors? Don't jack up the heat, just get the flats up off the floor. If you can put them on a bench. That would be best. That way the flats are up in the heat zone of the greenhouse and warm air in circulating under the flats.

If a bench is out of the question then at least remove the flats from direct contact with the floor. Use pressure-treated 4x4s, old wood pallets or some other inexpensive way to elevate the flats. Six inches off the floor will make a world of difference. This will allow some of the warm air in the greenhouse to circulate under the flat and heat the media. The warmer the media the less likely you'll see pre- and post-emergence diseases.

Producing Potatoes Using Plasticulture

Bill Lamont
Department of Horticulture
Penn State

Three varieties of potatoes — Eva, Kueka Gold, and Dark Red Norland — were grown at the Horticulture Research Farm using three colors of plastic mulch — red, silver, and black with bare ground as a check with drip irrigation.

Each variety was approximately ⅓ of an acre. The land was prepared and fertilizer was broadcast at the rate of 160 pounds of nitrogen. The plastic mulch and drip irrigation tape was applied using a mulch layer that made a 30-inch wide bed that was four inches high. The drip irrigation tape was from T-Systems International and was 8 mil thick and had the openings spaced 12 inches apart and was buried in the center of the bed 3-4 inches deep.

On May 18 seed pieces were planted using a waterwheel planter 12 inches apart in the row with 17-18 inches between the two rows on the mulched bed. The rows were 200 feet long. No additional fertilizer was added.

Admire was applied via the drip irrigation system.

July 31 the Dark Red Norlands were vine-killed and dug approximately 15 days later and Kueka Gold and Eva were vine-killed in the later part of August. After the plastic mulch and drip irrigation tape was retrieved, the Kueka Gold was dug on Sept. 6 and the Eva was dug on Sept. 7.

They were dug with a single row digger with a bagger attachment.

The yields out of the field were Dark Red Norland 304 hundredweight, Kueka Gold 479 hundredweight, and Eva 392 hundredweight. Bare ground was 130 hundredweight less than the yield of the plastic mulch treatments for each of the varieties.

Human Clinical Berry Trials To Begin This Spring

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Human clinical trials on the effects of berries to inhibit certain cancers are scheduled to begin in three months, according to the Ohio State University researcher who is heading the project.

Gary Stoner, head of the Laboratory of Cancer Chemoprevention and Etiology at OSU's James Cancer Hospital and Solove Research Institute, said preliminary studies will begin sometime in May to determine if certain berries, including strawberries and black raspberries, inhibit the development of esophageal and colon cancers in humans.

His most current research found that feeding cancer-induced rats 5-10 percent of freeze-dried black raspberries in their diet over a 36-week period reduced the development of colon tumors by 50 percent.

Malignant colon tumors were inhibited by 80 percent.

Similarly, in 25-week studies, strawberries and black raspberries reduced esophageal cancer by 50-60 percent. Such findings were enough for Stoner to seek funding for clinical trials to see if the berries produce similar results in humans.

"If the berries provide protection in animals, then they might also provide protection in humans," said Stoner.

The clinical trials will focus on two conditions: Barrett's Esophagus and Familial Adenomateous Polyposis (FAP). Barrett's Esophagus is a disorder in which the lining of the esophagus goes through cellular changes caused by acid reflux, leading to a type of cancer called esophageal adenocarcinoma. FAP is a rare genetic disease characterized by the development of polyps in the colon. If left untreated it develops into colorectal cancer. Some polyps return even after they have been surgically removed.

Stoner said the preliminary studies would address two issues: level of toxicity, if any, of berries in humans and how well components in berries are absorbed into the body.

"We want to see if berries exhibit any sort of toxicity. I don't expect to see any toxicity at all," said Stoner.

"Then we will collect blood to see what components of the berries are taken into the bloodstream and how high of levels can be achieved."

For Stoner, finding out what components of berries actually contribute to cancer inhibition has become just as much of a part of his research as determining which berries inhibit which types of cancer.

Stoner's research has revealed that dietary strawberries and black raspberries inhibit colon and esophageal cancers in lab rats. The berries were ineffective in inhibiting the development of lung cancer in mice, however.

'It may be a matter of absorption," said Stoner. "The inhibitory molecules in the berries may be absorbed locally in the esophagus and colon but do not get absorbed in the blood at high enough levels to be protective in the lung."

Stoner contends that ellagic acid, long considered to be a potential cancer inhibitor, is not working alone in fighting cancer. Berries contain a variety of vitamins and minerals and a host of antioxidants known collectively as phytonutrients that in some capacity do their part in fighting cancer and also other diseases such as diabetes, heart disease, stroke and osteoporosis.

'We think the inhibitory effect of berries is due to the combined effects of many components in them. The amount of ellagic acid in freeze-dried berries is one-fifth to one-tenth the amount we used in early experiments where we showed that ellagic acid by itself could inhibit esophageal cancer in rats," explains Stoner. "Yet the freeze-dried berries are just as active as pure ellagic acid. Therefore, there must be other substances in the berries that are responsible for their cancer-inhibitory effects."

Scientists are just now beginning to understand what phytonutrients are found in fruits and vegetables, but more research needs to be conducted to determine how these components inhibit diseases. To better educate the public on what phytonutrients are, the Produce for Better Health Foundation is teaming up with the U.S. Department of Agriculture to build a database of which phytonutrients are found in fruits and vegetables. The database is scheduled to be completed by this fall.

Ornamental Plant Germplasm Center Has New Director, Curator

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The Ohio State University Ornamental Plant Germplasm Center has a new director and curator to head up its staff.

David Tay, an internationally recognized leader in germplasm management, has been hired as the permanent director of the facility, succeeding interim director Jim Corfield.

Susan Stieve, a well-known breeder of African violets, has been appointed curator of the center.

"David brings the right blend of academic training, hands-on-knowledge of germplasm conservation, people skills, business skills and international exposure to help our center move quickly to become a world center for plant research," Corfield said.

Tay will be responsible for creating strategies, goals and objectives that the center will then fulfill through its activities. Germplasm acquisition, characterization, conservation, management and distribution are all central functions of the center. He has already devoted considerable time to creating a plan outline that will address what the research and commercial customers might expect from the center and how it can be best organized to meet those needs.

Tay brings more than 25 years of experience in germplasm work including plant breeding, taxonomy, seed production and enterprise management. Most recently, he has served as director of the Australian Seed and Propagation Technology Centre at the University of Queensland since 1995. He has worked with World Bank, FAO, the International Potato Center in Peru and as Head / Genebank Manager for the Asian Vegetable Research and Development Center in Taiwan.

Tay received his master's and doctorate degrees from the University of Birmingham in England and his undergraduate degree from the University of Malaya.

Susan Stieve, who has a solid background in breeding research that includes African violets, has been appointed curator of the center. She leaves her work as a plant breeder for Green Circle Growers and trial manager for Express Seed Company in Oberlin, Ohio, to accept the position.

"Susan knows ornamental plants as a breeder, a grower and as an innovator of new genetics. These are just the qualities we're looking for at the center," said Corfield.

In her breeding work, Stieve bred and selected 13 African violet cultivars that are in commercial production in North and South Americas, Europe and Australia.

Additional breeding research was conducted on more than a dozen other genera.

Stieve has a solid background in trial design, management and evaluation and has provided technical crop production assistance to growers throughout the country. She has been responsible for all aspects of operating a complex greenhouse and field operation that will serve her well in her capacity as curator. She will have day-to-day responsibility for maintaining germplasm collections at the center in addition to being a vital part of the team that locates, acquires and characterizes this germplasm.

Stieve earned her bachelor's and master's degrees in horticulture at the University of Wisconsin-Madison and completed virtually all of her doctorate work there before moving into private industry in Ohio in 1994.

The Ornamental Plant Germplasm Center is the first focused effort by the USDA's National Plant Germplasm System to manage germplasm of herbaceous ornamental plants. The germplasm, including seeds, bulbs, shoot tips and other living tissue, will be housed in facilities adjacent to the Department of Horticulture and Crop Science on main campus. Ohio State University's College of Food, Agricultural, and Environmental Sciences finalized a cooperative agreement with USDA in the summer of 1999 creating the center as a joint research venture.

Cabbage Research Development Program Awards $35,400 For 2001

GENEVA, N.Y. — Michael Riner, president of the New York State Cabbage Research and Development Program's advisory board, announced $35,400 in funding for eight cabbage research proposals during the New York State Vegetable Conference in Syracuse, in early February.

"The proposed research projects were excellent," he said. He announced that the R&D assessment would increase to $3/acre in 2001.

"The Empire State ranks first in total cabbage acreage in the U.S., which includes fresh market and kraut cabbage," said Cornell University vegetable horticulturist Stephen Reiners, who works at the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station in Geneva. New York's 2000 cabbage crop was worth more than $80 million.

The Cabbage Research & Development Program Advisory Board met Feb. 8 at the Experiment Station to consider the cabbage research proposals they would fund with the money they raised under the $2.50/acre Research & Development fund assessment in 2000. Last year was the first season the assessment was in effect.

Nine research proposals were received, requesting $60,000 in funds. Among them were proposals from Cornell University researchers Helene Dillard, Phil Griffiths, Tony Shelton, Lisa Earle, John Roberts, Steve Reiners, Al Taylor, and others.

Projects funded included research in weed management, controlling alternaria leaf spot, breeding improved varieties, controlling pests such as Diamondback moth and cabbage maggots, the effects of hot water treatments on cabbage seed quality, processing, and storage.

"Cabbage usually ranks near potatoes and onions in value among vegetables in New York," said Reiners. "Since it is important to such a large segment of the industry, cabbage researchers at Cornell need to keep the industry up to date on all aspects of production-pest management, culture, post harvest, etc. The industry usually wants to see research on topics that will benefit them in the short term-things like how they'll control thrips or rot next year, or what they can use to control weeds."
